ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I am not sure that it will be possible to acknowledge all those who have – been regarded as my big family – inspired this dissertation into shape. There is no more appropriate a place to start than with my immediate family. My wife, who has become our children's parents, deserves primary acknowledgement and heartfelt gratefulness. She and our children have been a constant source of love and life and, above all, sacrifices and deprivations. In addition, both she and her family have provided ongoing assistance by giving me relief from other responsibilities during this endeavor. I thank my in-laws for not only their support, but for raising a wonderful girl, I am lucky to have her as my wife.

Professor Dr. Ashok Thorat, has always been a source of pride for any researcher to supervise his research, for which I am particularly grateful. I must offer profuse thanks to him since – amidst his many duties and responsibilities – he has been a constant source of support, understanding and tolerance, without which "The Image of Imperialism in English Literature" would never have been started. I feel honoured to have worked under his guidance. I would also like to extend my debt of gratitude to Dr. Munira Lokhandwala, Associate Professor, Abeda Inamdar Senior College, Pune not for just proofreading the final draft of this study, but for her rewarding critical insights and valuable suggestions throughout the process of her careful readings.
I would also like to express my gratitude to all my friends and colleagues. I must single out my friend and colleague Associate Professor Dr. Mohamed Fadhle to whom I am greatly indebted for providing incalculable constant support during my academic studies in India. My gratitude is extended also to Dr. Hasen Ala’aqel. I should also mention N. Ali, A. Teinah, G. Azazi, M. Albadri, A. Thabet, Ben Ali, A. Abubaker, S. Sheiwahi, S. Amri, A. Hamadani, Arafat, Abdulsalam, S. Salah, M. Mosa’d, M. Lasfooh, A. and N. Basoheib, Aldelqi, G. Qashash, Jamal M., Abdulkareem. These have become my Yemeni family in India. I would also like to thank Firuza Diyarova for typing the first two chapters. I owe special thanks to Dr. A. Salahi and brothers, Mahmood A., Omer S. and A. Abdulkhaliq for their encouragement and support. I cannot thank you all enough. However, named and unnamed, I am grateful to all of you.

Coming to the end, I would like to offer many thanks to the authorities – including the academic and non-academic – of the IASE and University of Pune for their cooperation. Finally, to all my teachers – past, present, and future – in all their many guises – I am grateful.

Then, most of all and above the whole, all praise and gratitude be to Allah (glorified and exalted be He), before and after, for everything.
