As I worked towards completing this study that emerged from deep personal concerns and confusions, I realised how much people around us shape our experiences and perspectives. At the end of this endeavour, it is time to put the spotlight on the 'real' people who contributed to this task at various junctions. I guess the true worth of it all was revealed when someone looked at the thesis fondly with a gleam of joy in his eyes. It was none other than my Research Guide, Dr. J.J. Roy Burman who said it all in those expressions. Sir, with all the ups and downs we have borne together for so many years, the most significant thing that I have learnt from you is to respect people beyond the categories of 'little' or 'great'.

A qualitative research exercise of this nature continuously strengthens trust in people and this is exactly what I feel towards the research participants who entertained me, went out their ways and means to host me and shared their life stories with a stranger who spoke a different language. I am extremely grateful to the people at Haji Malang who never got tired of seeing me walking up and down the mountain. Some of my richest experiences were shaped in the company of sawbas andFAqirs who sat patiently through my questions and curiosities. This also includes the hereditary custodian of the Haji Malang dargah who treated me like a daughter with his family doting on me as I intruded into their home and private lives on numerous occasions. I would also like to thank Nandkishore and Rakesh who accompanied me to the field and helped me communicate with the research participants in Marathi.

The two people who have waited all their lives to set their eyes upon this thesis have been my Maa and Bapi. Not a single harsh word, no impatience and rather a constant encouragement, unconditional love and faith in me have enabled me to stay away from various worldly concerns so that I could concentrate on completing the study. Two others who added to this encouragement were Didabai and Dadabhai who just knew that 'I would do it!' Parveen and Iram have been two women in my life from whom I have learnt to be patient and content with what I have and often when I felt low, I would draw from their energy to go on. Abba and Anmi have been patiently treating me with love and Anmi's insistence that I have home cooked food just added to the warmth that was required through this journey.
At the Tata Institute of Social Sciences, discussions with Prof. N. Jayaram, Dr. Ranu Jain, Dr. Manish Jha and Mr. Shajahan contributed to my knowledge about the conceptual and field based paradigms around debates related to the study. Discussions with Prof. Imtiaz Ahmad, Prof. B.K. Roy Burman, Prof. J.P. S. Uberoi and Father Rudolf Heredia from Delhi enabled me to broaden my perspectives around the subject and Prof. A. R. Momin from Mumbai provided valuable inputs for the study. I extend my gratitude to Dr. Steven Ramey from the University of Alabama who was generous enough to share his work with me just on the basis of an e-mail I sent him.

This research study would not have been complete without the support of library staff at the Dorabji Tata Memorial Library, TISS and Bombay Archives at Elphinstone College, Mumbai; Nehru Memorial Library, Delhi; Gokhale Memorial Institute Library, Deccan College Library and Karve Institute Library, Pune. The Meetings Section at TISS with Mr. Balakrishnan, Mrs. Manju and Mrs. Sitalakshmi were constant sources of encouragement in the due course of the study and steadily provided with administrative assistance. Heartfelt gratitude is also due to the EDP section that rendered valuable technical support.

I also take this opportunity to thank my ‘family’ for the last four years – people who have had fun with me, listened to my woes and worked together as peers towards a single mission with diverse objectives. Big thanks to Chandrani, Mamtha, Sayanrani, Nandini, Milly, Vairhegi, Sister Susan, Surbhi and Kamlesh and Barsha for being the support always. Thank you Joyita for your encouragement and for showing the way towards completion!

My friends from different parts of the world have encouraged me to work tirelessly even as they shared the burden of my work at various points of time and I extend my gratitude towards all of them. My team at SAHER never complained when I decided to go on a break leaving them to fend for themselves at crucial moments and I owe this work to them.

Akhtar – my friend, guide and partner bore the brunt of the many ‘blues’ that I encountered throughout the study. I would not thank you for that would belittle the faith you entrusted on my abilities even when I would be mired in self doubt. I entreat you to share this joy as I dedicate this thesis to you for the way you have taught me the values of peace and coexistence.
