References

Ellis, J. (1993). Japanese students abroad: relating language ability in class and in the community. Thought Currents in English Literature, 66, 45–82.

Jacobsen, D. M. (2001). Building Different Bridges: Technology Integration, Engaged Student Learning, and New Approaches to Professional Development. Paper presented at the AERA 2001: What We Know and How We Know It, the 82nd Annual Meeting of the American Educational Research Association, Seattle, WA.

Morgan, Hani. (2014). Using digital story project to help students improve in reading and writing. Reading Improvement 5.1, 20-26

Neo, M., & Neo, T. K. (2010). Students’ perceptions in developing a multimedia project within a constructivist learning environment: a Malaysian experience. The Turkish Online our students learn-and teach. Cable in the Classroom, 16-18.

University of Houston, (2011). The educational uses of digital storytelling.

http://digitalstorytelling.coe.uh.edu

boards: A quasi experimental study on promoting learners’ critical thinking skills

Research Express@NCKU Volume 3 Issue 7.

Internet references

4. Technological Pedagogical Content Knowledge: http://tpack.org