“The Pepper Paper People: A Portrait of the Syrian Christian Community as Reflected in the works of Selected Authors” has been an enriching voyage of discovery through the sea of fiction to the land of fact. Many are the hands that guided this bark as it sailed on to its destination and I place on record my gratitude to all of them.

My supervisor and guide, Dr. Annie Margaret has always been a source of encouragement and inspiration. I thank her for her abiding faith in my abilities which has acted as a spur to my efforts. I also thank the Directors of the Post Graduate Department and Research Centre in English, Baselius College, Dr. Alexander Raju and Dr. Varghese Leena, for their support and co-operation. I appreciate the encouragement shown me by the Principals of Baselius College and I am also grateful to the former Head of the Department, Dr. Saramma Varghese and to the members of the Department of English, Baselius College for making me warmly welcome during the whole period of my study there.

I thank the former Principal of the CMS College, Prof. Korulla Issac, and the Manager of the College, Bishop Thomas Samuel for having allowed me to embark upon this voyage of discovery. I also record my gratitude to the University Grants Commission which awarded me with the Teacher Fellowship in the X Plan period and to the Government of Kerala for having concurred with the UGC so that I could pursue academic research for two years. I render my thanks to the present Principal of the CMS College, Prof. M.M.Korah, to all my colleagues in the CMS College, particularly those in the Department of English, for their genuine care and concern for me.

It would be total ingratitude on my part if I did not acknowledge the encouragement and wise guidance of Rev. Dr. Jacob Cherian, the Vicar of St. Thomas Marthoma Church, Kottayam. His keen perusal of this work and his sage counsel regarding its shortcomings have safely guided it to its destination. He is truly the kind of spiritual father who has enriched the Syrian Christian community over the ages. I place on record my thanks to the Rev. Dr. Jacob Cherian, the Vicar of my parish.

I thank my dear friends, Prof. C. A. Abraham and Dr. Sobhana Kurien, who have always sustained me by their help, advice, support and encouragement in every endeavour I undertake. Dr. Sobhana’s expertise in documentation has proved to be of immense help. I also thank my good friends, Dr. Alex Mathew and Prof. Elizabeth Thomas of the Mar Thoma College, Thiruvella for their constant support and good advice.

I would be the most ungrateful person if I did not thank the true midwives of this endeavour - my children, Appu and Anju - but for whom this study would have been still born. If Appu guided me safely and swiftly through the maze of bureaucracy at the University, Anju sustained me by her earnest prayers and cheerful optimism. My husband Prof. P. C. John has been a beacon of light to guide this study along making me always conscious of the rocks that lie hidden, just as he has been and continues to be the beacon of light in our life together. I am most grateful to Ms. Shanta, another vital member of my family, for relieving me of the necessities of housekeeping.

My brothers and sisters have eagerly looked forward to the birth of this study just as they had many years ago eagerly looked forward to my birth. My mother in law too was most interested in and concerned about this work. The bigger Syrian Christian family to which I belong consisting of aunts, uncles and cousins also encouraged me with their prayers and expectations. My friends in the prayer group of our church, particularly my dear friend Mrs. Annamma Mathew, as well as my dear senior friend Mrs. Thankamma George, have been pillars of strength and encouragement. I express my gratitude to all of them for their prayerful support.

I also place on record my gratitude to all my teachers who have encouraged me by their prayers and good wishes. Some of my teachers have gone to their Heavenly rest like Dr. K.Ayyappa Panicker who had been instrumental in the choice of such a subject for study and Prof. G. Kumara Pillai for whom I had been a favourite student. I pay my tribute to these great teachers. I must also record my appreciation of Dr. Chandrika Balan, Dept.of English, All Saints’ College, Trivandrum for having assured me that I am on the right track with regard to this study; and Prof. Dr. V.C.Harris, Director, School of Letters, Mahatma Gandhi University for having cleared my doubts about this study at various stages of its production.

I am most thankful to Mr. Samuel Abraham of the Mar Thoma Seminary for his meticulous care in giving this thesis its present shape. I also thank Ms. Suma for her warm hospitality.

In spite of the help and support I received from all quarters this bark would have foundered when it set out if it had not been guided and protected by Almighty God. I lift my heart up to the Lord in humble gratitude for making me a part of this community which with its clever enterprise, its close family attachments and its occasional double standards, with all its merits and defects, gives me roots and identity, “a local habitation and a name.” This work is dedicated to my family, particularly my parents and parents in law who have made me what I am.
