ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

The author is highly indebted to Dr. S. SHANMUGASUNDARAM, Professor of commerce, P.G. Extension Centre, University of Madras, Salem-11, for having inspired the author to take up the present problem for research studies, offered valuable guidance and provided all facilities for the work.

The author wishes to express her sincere thanks to Dr. N. V. NAYAKAM, Professor & Head, Department of Commerce, P.G. Extn Centre, University of Madras, Salem 11, for his encouragement during the period of study.

The author is grateful to The COMMISSIONER OF COLLEGIATE EDUCATION, Madras-6 and The PRINCIPAL, Govt. Arts College for Women, Salem-8 for permitting her to undergo this research work.

The author's sincere thanks are due to the Commissioner of Handlooms and Textiles, Madras. The Asst. Director of Handlooms & Textile, Salem - 7, and the members of the staff, office of the Asst. Director Handlooms and Textiles, Salem - 7 for permitting her to collect the data.

The Author is highly indebted to Professor N. Radhakrishnan, Dept. of Statistics and Professor P. Ganesan, Dept. of Co-operation, and Prof. R. Rengararajan, Dept. of Geology, for their constant encouragement during the period of study.

Dr. V. Balasubramaniam had offered very valuable suggestions whenever he was consulted by the author which is sincerely acknowledged with gratitude.

The author is thankful to her husband Shri. V. Sridharan, Lecturer in Geology, Govt. Arts College, Salem - 7 for his constant encouragement during the finalisation of this dissertation.
The author is also grateful to the non-teaching staff of the Commerce Dept., P.G. Ext. Centre, University of Madras, for their wholehearted co-operation and encouragement in the course of the execution of this work.

The author thanks Mr. Sankaranarayanan, M.Com., B.L., of M/s Radha Computer Services, Salem - 7 for his tireless efforts in bringing out the dissertation in a good form.

__N. Geetha.__