AKNOWLEDGEMENT

Since I have been teaching and counseling clinically in the area of Teenagers' sexuality, I have been very impressed with the difficulties that the teenagers have in talking explicitly with one another and with me about their sexuality. At an age when uncertainty about their masculinity, femininity or just sexuality is omnipresent, the teenagers are not about to risk possible shame, embarrassment, or ostracism by revealing his/her most intimate thought.

This research given me a scope to acquire the research skills and to enrich through gaining knowledge of the ground realities at the field work.

For this research, many individuals and institutions have been helpful and cooperative to me. I have to single out one person for my very special appreciation. Because so much of this subject matter has been so close to me, I have needed a very special kind of person to help me see the woods for the trees. The right person for my guide had to be someone of particular sophistication in this subject. That person is Professor Dr. Hemixaben Rao. It was a pleasure to work under someone with such knowledge, tact, humor, humanity and fierce intelligence. Thanks a million to Dr. Lal Rathod who inspired and advised me that while there has been lot of research concerning teenagers' sexual attitudes and behavior, and the findings have usually been published in medical journals – sources which are relatively inaccessible to teenagers, so I should do and publish my research in sociology.

I am indebted to all principals, staff and students of all the schools I have selected for my research. I am also indebted to all parents, social leaders, political leaders and religious leaders to grant me personal interviews for my research. I am extremely grateful to all participants for my case studies.

The work would not have been accomplished without the warmth and moral support of my family members. I am grateful to my student Khyati, a computer wizard for the support in preparing my thesis. I am also indebted to Professor Dr. Bhadrayu for guidance in preparing the questionnaire. He was always been a great source of inspiration in my research.

Last but not the least I am grateful to all of them whose names have not been mentioned here but who supported me directly or indirectly in completing my research.

Thanks a million one and all for helping me during working on this interesting and absorbing thesis.
