ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Every research needs a guidance in the absence of which the research fail to get proper direction and becomes an unending task. Hence, I acknowledge my indebtedness to Dr. S.N. Malakar, my supervisor Associate Professor, Centre for West Asian and African Studies, Jawaharlal Nehru University.

I acknowledge my sincerest thanks to Professor Girijesh Pant, the Chair-person, Centre for West Asian and African Studies, Jawaharlal Nehru University, whose positive outlook and support made it possible to complete this research.

I owe my indebtedness to Dr. Ajay Dubey for his valuable suggestion during the theoretical discourse developed for this research.

I owe my allegiance to Louis Braille, a giant personality of 19th century who invented a script for the visually challenged and opened a vista for acquiring knowledge through print media in Braille and paved the way of storing knowledge for the future visually impaired generation.

It will be unfair on my part if the role of two personalities is not acknowledged. These are: Dr. William Rowland, the President, World Blind Union, whose contribution is well-known to the specially challenged in general and visually challenged in particular of South Africa and late Mr. Lal Advani, whose farsightedness became to develop such a multifarious policy for the specially challenged in general and the visually impaired in particular in India. Perhaps, there is no single policy about this segment of society where we do not find the indelible imprints of their wisdom.
No research is possible without the co-operation of various administrative and non-administrative officials as their humanly attitude develops a sense of the feeling of being at home. Hence, I acknowledge their role with the expression of gratitude.

Undoubtedly, it is pertinent to accept the role of various libraries and its staff. It includes the Library of the South African National Council for the Blind, Pretoria; Library of University of KwaZulu Natal, Durban; Tape Aids for the Blind, Durban; Library of Delhi School of Social Work, Delhi University, Delhi; Library of the Blind Relief Association, Delhi and, last but not the least, the Library of Jawaharlal Nehru University, Delhi. Hence, I acknowledge, with thanks, the contribution of these houses of knowledge.

It is pertinent here to acknowledge the contribution of the technological developments in favour of the visually challenged by developing screen reading softwares and special software for scanning which made it easy for the visually challenged to go through any printed material in English. It is praiseworthy to mention that it has cut the cost of readers for the same purpose.

I express my indebtedness to Mr. Jagdish Chander, Lecturer, Hindu College, who helped me to arrange some recent books on Disability rights movement from the United States of America and that proved to be a major source of developing theoretical perspective.

As this is a survey based research, it becomes a difficult task to get reality by making a single trip of any country, hence, for the purpose of this research, I made almost four trips and I deem it fit to pay my sincerest thanks to Dr. Bishnu Mahapatra, the Director, Ford Foundation which took personal interest in finding the way to get sponsorship for the total expenditures of one of my trips for a month and I also like to pay thanks to Mr. Surendra Sharma, a famous poet of India who helped me to make another trip to South Africa. I feel that without their help, it was virtually impossible for me to do justice with the work I have been assigned.

There are some personalities in South Africa who opened the door to find the answer of my inquisitiveness for the purpose of my research. First of all, I wish to thank Professor Phyllis Zungu, of the Linguistic department, University of KwaZulu-Natal, Durban who made it possible to introduce me with some of the organisations of and for the visually challenged.

Then I wish to express my gratitude to Mr. M. Krishnan Shunmugam, the in-charge of Disability Desk in the University of KwaZulu-Natal, who facilitated me by arranging the support base in many ways. It was his personal contribution by which I could manage to contact variety of visually impaired students of the university.

My sincerest thanks go to innumerable representatives of various organisations of and for the visually challenged in South Africa and India. In this regard, I wish to thank personally to Mr. Jace Nair, the Chief Executive Officer of Natal Blind and Deaf Society, Durban, KwaZulu-Natal and Ms. Saffura Khan, President, Phoenix Light Group for the Specially challenged, whose eye-opener pieces of information made me aware of the socio-economic and cultural background of South Africa.

This milestone cannot be achieved without the contribution of various dignitaries of the South African Council for the Blind who facilitated me in terms of providing relevant literature and pieces of information relating to the policies.

My special thanks go to Ms. Agnes Mansena, Secretary, Department of Advocacy, South African National Council for the blind, who, through her commitment and sincerest endeavour made it possible not only to arrange meetings with different personnel of the Council but also made me feel at home with her hospitality. It is because of her I never felt like an alien in South Africa.
I express my indebtedness to those who helped me in formatting the text of the thesis and also those who read some of the manuscripts and did translation of some of the texts in the African languages.

Last but not the least, I thank Vidha, my daughter and Indu, my wife whose patience made it possible to bear with me for such an uphill task.
