ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

It needs a highly surgical skill to deliberate on a seemingly familiar subject ‘Marketing of Life Insurance Services’ and present a holistic picture of the institutional working. Nothing less than a comprehensive understanding of the aims and the objectives, the organizational structure, social and economic reach and such other things, can be of any avail in such an endeavour.

For a young research scholar, the task is all the more daunting. Her enthusiasm begins to wane in the face of stiff task of sifting the things from the mounds and mounds of written material. But for a thoughtful guidance of a well-meaning guide, all the labour of the aspiring scholar can go haywire. Fortunately, I had the benign supervision of Dr. H.S Sandhu who helped me to chart the path of the study. His observations and comments constantly motivated me to remain focused on the subject. It has been my good fortune to be his student.

Dr. Balwinder Singh, Professor and Head, Department of Commerce and Business Management, Guru Nanak Dev University, Amritsar, provided me all administrative help and support. I am equally obliged to all the faculty members in the Department of Commerce and Business Management for their constant inspiration and co-operation. I would also like to thank administrative staff members of the department for their generous support as and when required.

I must mention and thank A. Parasuraman, Professor, School of Business Administration, University of Miami, Florida (US), Chandrasekharan Rajendran, Professor, and Mr. Antony, Indian Institute of Technology, Madras, for generously sharing their time and knowledge that enabled me to develop a virtual framework of my research work. I greatly appreciate Professor O.N Bhat, for his invaluable recommendations in helping me to make the study a well structured effort. I also acknowledge my debt to Dr. Pratibha Rai, Professor, University of Delhi, for her inspiring advice and support.
I am equally grateful to my colleagues and institutions for sharing their resources that have been utilized to prepare this thesis. I owe my gratitude to the staff of Commerce and Business Management Department library, Bhai Guru Das Library of Guru Nanak Dev University, Amritsar; Punjab University Library, Chandigarh; Rattan Tata Library, Delhi School of Economics, Faculty of Management Studies, ICSSR, New Delhi; and Management Development Institute, Gurgaon, for their friendly help in my endeavor.

I wish to gratefully make mention of the Managers, Development Officers and Training Executives of Life Insurance Corporation of India (based in Punjab) for providing the information for the research work and helping me to make an interaction with the agents to get the questionnaires filled, designed to assess their perception.

I want to express my gratitude to my good friend, Dr. Poonam Sharma, Professor, Guru Nanak Dev University, Amritsar, not only for her excellent comments, but also for listening to me whenever I felt excited about any new idea. I am also obliged to all those scholars and authors whose views have been used in writing up this thesis. I acknowledge the precious help accorded to me by the enthusiastic respondents.

Lest, love’s labour be lost, let me deeply thank my family members for their unflinching love, patience, understanding, and encouragement in an unlimited measure. My special thanks are due to my parents without whose indulgence; this work would have remained only a wish.

I also acknowledge the help extended to me for type setting and printing the manuscript by M/s Subhash, Pawan and Vishal (Subhash Computers), Amritsar.

God be praised for bestowing me such an opportunity to have successfully accomplished a task. JAI MATA DI!!!
