It is not an exaggeration to say that this work would not have seen the light of the day in the absence of the continuous co-operation that is received from several quarters throughout the course of the work.

Foremost, mention must be made about my research supervisor Professor K.P. Saksena, Head of the Centre for International Politics and Organization, School of International Studies. Professor Saksena has been more than a mere supervisor to me. He went through the drafts a number of times with utmost care and undiminished patience, and made suggestions at every stage to improve the quality of the work. I take this opportunity to express a deep sense of gratitude to him from the bottom of my heart. I am also thankful to Professor M.S. Rajan (of the Centre for International Politics and Organization) who took interest in my work and encouraged me to work with dedication.

The source of sustaining my interest to pursue this work has been the research fellowship awarded to me by the Jawaharlal Nehru University. In addition, the University sponsored and financed my field research work in the United States for a duration of four months in 1981.
In this respect, I am highly obliged to the authorities of the Jawaharlal Nehru University.

My research work in New York city (USA) was completed satisfactorily largely due to the co-operation extended by the Permanent Mission of India to the United Nations, the United Nations Secretariat, and the diplomatic officials working in the Missions of various Member States. I am restrained to mention here the names of these distinguished officials because all of them wished to remain unidentified for their own reasons. I record my deep appreciation of the valuable co-operation they unhesitatingly extended to me.

I am thankful to the officials in the Ministry of External Affairs in New Delhi and non-officials also who readily spared time to talk and throw light on various aspects of the study.

Much of the data collection was made possible and easier with the quick and efficient services rendered by the Indian Council of World Affairs Library (New Delhi), the United Nations Information Centre Library (New Delhi) and the Dag Hammarskjold Library (New York). The facilities available at the Jawaharlal Nehru University Library, Ministry of External Affairs Library, Parliament Library, Rattan Tata Library, American Center Library—all at New Delhi—were also liberally made use of.
Further, to strike a more personal note, it should be mentioned that my parents always blessed every effort of mine. The affection they and my brothers and sisters most touchingly showered on me had been constantly the guiding spirit in all my endeavours.

Among friends, who are fortunately in abundance to extend helping hand whenever needed, particular mention must be made about Messrs Vijay R Gavini and Dharma R Kodali who saw to it that my stay in the United States was comfortable as well as successful. It is indeed a great feeling to recall the days of my association with them.

Also, I acknowledge with thanks the efficient and timely typing services rendered by Mrs B.L. Pahwa.

However, it should be finally stated that I alone—indeed none else—as responsible for the views held and any shortcomings found in this study. No study perhaps firmly claims perfection; this study surely does not make a pretence of it.

New Delhi,
July 5, 1982.
