Acknowledgement

While submitting this dissertation for evaluation, it is my humble duty to express my sense of immense gratitude to all who have directly and indirectly turned out to be resourceful, helpful and inspiring without which the work would not have taken the shape as it has assumed now.

I must register special thanks to Dr. Sariit K. Chaudhuri, Associate Professor, Arunachal Institute of Tribal Studies, Rajiv Gandhi University for guiding me through out the tenure of my research work without whose help it would have been an unfulfilled dream. He has been friendly, resourceful and always prompts to respond to any information I looked for. I cannot forget his suggestions and the hour long discussions for which he had to set aside his regular schedule of academic activities.

I sincerely express my gratefulness to Prof. Tamo Mibang, Director of Arunachal Institute of Tribal Studies for his frequent encouragement which helped me a lot to leap out from the depth of diffidence. He has also recurrently managed out time from his busy schedule to spare for various official works in regard to the processing of my PhD related matters to the concerned administration of the university for which I express my gratitude towards him.

My words fall short to express heartfelt gratitude and respectfulness towards the esteemed faculties of Institute of Tribal Studies who like Dr. M. C. Behera, Dr. S. S. Chaudhuri, Miss Jumyir Basar, Miss L. Lomdak and Dr. H. V. Singh have always inspired me to carry out research work. They have also deciphered knowledge in the research methodology for which I am indebted to them.

It is my humble acknowledgement to the authority of Rajiv Gandhi University for allowing me access to the facilities available including hostel, library, computers, internet, etc. without incorporation of all those mosaic resources around me by the university it would not have been possible to articulate this thesis. Further, several faculty members and the non-teaching staffs in the university have assisted me in the period of my research work, both academic and official. For their kind act I overwhelmingly express my gratefulness to them.

I am grateful to the University Grant Commission for the fellowship grant which helped me financially to accomplish various PhD related works both in the field and the department.

In the course of my work, it happened to visit different localities in the study area where I received moral support and help besides dear best hospitality for which I shall remain indebted to them. All the general and key informants who have equipped me with their in-depth knowledge in the direction of the objectives of this research which have turned out to be the cornerstone of this thesis are sincerely acknowledged. To name a few friends in the study area who have assisted me directly and indirectly during the period of my research are Mr. R. Mami, Ms. C. Kenglang, Mr. S. Tarsim, Mr. I. Lulin, Mr. M. Tangan, Mr. W. N. Fasim, etc.

Words often fail to express one’s inner feelings towards one’s philanthropy, but the only instrument I have is the language with the help of which I would like to express my sincere and cordial respect to my heavenly departed parent, and family members who have bestowed moral support, love and inspiration for my progressive academic achievements.

Many other individuals came forward to help me in compilation of this dissertation for which my heartfelt thanks are due to Mr. T. Mene, C. N. Singkai, A. Keyang, T. Saroh, N. K. Das, and Miss S. Daa-dhora. Besides, all my dear friends and colleagues who have stayed beside me as a source of inspiration are acknowledged by heart.

I like to registrar my special heartfelt thanks to Dr. J. S. Rawat, T. Rina, and Mr. Boni Amin Laskar for their constant help in the preparation of Maps, Charts, arranging photographs and even printing my dissertation.

I am always indebted to my parent and villagers who have extended support and encouraged towards me all times for academic excellence.

Lastly, but may not be the least, I am also thankful to Mr. Rana Deb for typing my dissertation despite of his busy official schedule.
