TABLE OF CONTENTS

- Preface

CHAPTER

1. Introduction - Problem in Perspective
   - The value of Money-
     1. Is the inflation of sufficient permanency
     2. Conception of expression of alterations in the money value
     3. Neutralisation of alterations in money value
     4. Problem of choice of price indices
     5. What difference does it make - Impact on Financial reports

2. Financial Reporting -
   - Anatomy of financial information system-
     1. Significance of information
     2. Basic Principles of Communication - disclosure and materiality
     3. Characteristics of information system

3. Effects of Inflation on Financial Reports -
   1. Basic Problem
   2. Factors leading to distortions in financial reports
(iii) Income Statement and balance sheet—

Some important accounting items

(a) Profit ascertainment
(b) Fixed Assets
(c) Current Assets
(d) Assets and Liability Claims

Value of long term trends

(a) Undistributed corporate earnings
(b) Investment and Employment

(iv) Inflation and generally accepted accounting principles—

(a) Adjusted cost or market for inventories
(b) Lifo as a Partial adjustment
(c) Deferred income tax on Price level "increments"
(d) Long term debts and the depreciation adjustments
(e) Monetary items and the realisation concept

4. Methods of disclosure of effects of inflation

(i) Methods of Revaluation
(ii) Current Purchasing Power method
(iii) Current Cost accounting method
(iv) Views on the above methods.

5. Case studies of two Indian Companies

6. Conclusion - Findings and Suggestions