ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The following is a humble attempt to show my gratitude and thank all the persons who helped me in making the thesis a reality. First and foremost my teacher, guide and supervisor Dr. B.V. Sharma for his guidance not only during the PhD but also for the entire student days beginning from the masters level in anthropology especially for developing and encouraging interests in the field of medical anthropology. I thank him for his guidance suggestions and constant support regarding all aspects of this work, which included finalization of the current topic, guidance to collect data from the field and utmost patience during the writing and finalization of the thesis.

I am extremely grateful Prof. K.K. Mishra, Head of the department, Anthropology for all the support extended for the submission of the thesis. I also want to thank Prof. Venkat Rao for his cooperation and Dr Shiva Prasad for all his valuable suggestions during the study. I would also like to thank Dr Rajashekar (from Management Studies) for his help in analyzing the data using SPSS package.

I thank all the non-teaching staff of the department of Anthropology for all the needful help extended during my time in the university. My sincere thanks to Mr. Shekar, Mr. Adhinarayana, Ashok Dada and Mrs. Subhashini for without their help this work would not have taken the present shape.

I take this opportunity to thank all the Practitioners of Ayurveda and Unani for sparing their valuable time for the study. Special mention should me made about Dr. Basheer Ahmed (BUMS, M.D), Dr. S. J. Hussain (Director Central research institute in Unani medicine ) ,Dr. Waheed (BUMS), Dr. Vasudeva Rao (BAMS,M.D) for sparing their valuable time and providing inputs for the study .1 take this opportunity to thank the Heads of the Nizamia Tibbi college of Unani, Govt Ayurvedic College and Central research institute in Unani medicine for allowing me to utilize the library facilities. Special mention should be made regarding the Registrar and officials of the State board of Indian systems of medicine and Homeopathy for providing me relevant information especially regarding the availability of the practitioners in Hyderabad and also extending help as when required. I am grateful to APSACS for introducing me to the Board of ISM&H, which was indeed helpful.

This is also to thank all the respondents in the hospital, clinics who voluntarily shared information with me without which the study would not have been possible.

Thanks to all my friends Neeraja, Madhav, Bhavani, Sharavan, Ravindra Jyothsana, Lakshmi, Anjum and Sundari who helped me in numerous ways ranging from encouragement to submit the thesis, collection of relevant literature and sharing known information on all aspects of the work. Then all the family friends who supported me during my short but lonely stay in BHEL. For all huge number of relatives (all the uncles, aunties, and cousins can’t name as the list is long) who constantly assured their support and prayers for the completion of the thesis. Mention should be made about Valliappan and Valliammma who always encouraged me to take up the Ph.D and complete it.

My family without whom this would have never been possible. Mummy, Chetan, Chechi for constantly reminding me to complete it at the earliest and Rubin for wanting me to be away from Bangalore so he can play with his Ellayppan. It is indeed a blessing to have them as a family for the constant support and encouragement. My Co-Sister for ensuring to a great extent my husband got wonderful home food when I was away for the study. Also, remembering Papa who during a short conversation last Christmas asked me to finish off the thesis.

My parents Mummy and Daddy for giving me everything I wanted in life and making me what me I am by supporting me in all ways. Mummy, for sharing all my anxieties during some difficult times and being away from daddy so as to be with me for the study for a long time. My Chechi, Chetan and Abhi for all the love to complete the study. Chechi for constantly reminding me during my working days to concentrate on the Ph.d. My Chetan for providing me with a base at Hyderabad during the last months of the study which was very crucial for me and driving me down to the university all of the times which was indeed a great blessing. Aniechi for all the encouragement extended. Then my better half Ajit, I do not know what to write for I am not sure if it wasn't for him might me this would have never happened. For making me realize not let go off something you want and regret it later in life. For firing me and putting the spirit back in me during some lazy moments. Patiently agreeing to all my delays in the thesis and finally being with me during the most crucial phase that is the submission and helping me with all the technical details. I can only say I am lucky and thankful for a wonderful partner. My entire family who is my backbone, this is for all of you.
Above all Gratitude to the Lord almighty for making it finally happen.
