I am deeply grateful to my supervisors, Prof. E. Haribabu and Prof. Prajit K. Basu for their inputs and guidance, for suggesting that I work on this topic and for their constant encouragement and the parenting, all through the years of my PhD.

I am extremely grateful to Dr Javed Iqbal, Director, ILS, for all the insights and for acquainting me with the intricacies of R&D in the Indian pharmaceutical industry.

I also express my thanks to:

Prof. Sasheej Hegde, Department of Sociology for all the discussions and useful comments and Dr V. Janardhan, for the suggestions related to the field work part of the study.

All the faculty members in the Department of Sociology, University of Hyderabad and in particular, Dr K. Laxminarayana, Dr Purendra Prasad and Dr Aparna Rayaprol for their encouragement and concern.

Prof Kulkarni, Department of Philosophy and Dr V. K. Jairath, Department of Sociology, for their comments and suggestions.

Mr Tirupataiah, Mr Madhusoodhan and Mr Bhavanishankar, office staff of the department of Sociology, for their concern and help.

The UGC for providing me with a UPE Fellowship and the Jawaharlal Nehru Memorial Trust (Teen Murti) for awarding me a fellowship for doctoral studies in India.

NISTADS, New Delhi for funding a small component of my field work during my tenure in the institute as a Fellow. I also thank Dr Parthasarathi Banerjee, Director, NISTADS for all the support and encouragement in this regard.

Dr Visalakshi, Scientist G, NISTADS (retd.), for all the help and logistic support during my field trip to Ahmedabad and Baroda.

Dr Ananth Phadke for permitting me to use the library at Sathi-CEHAT, Pune

Dr CM Gulhati, Mr Chinu Srinivasan, Dr Amit Sengupta and Mr Dinesh Abrol for all the insights and discussions

Dr Jean Paul Gaudilliere, CERMES-INSERM, Paris, for all the suggestions, comments and useful literature during the EHESS workshop in Pondicherry in March 2008.
Sangi, Lisha, Amu and Usha, for loving me steadfastly all through these years

Mahesh, JNU, for always being a wonderful friend and for all the logistic support and the timely help.

Anita, Beena, Viji, Nabu and a host of other friends from LH-II, for some lovely, hilarious and senti moments on campus.

Nags and Abbas, for all the help and support, right from the days of my M.Phil.

All my fellow research scholars in the department of sociology.

Appa, Amma, Srini and my family in Mumbai, for the unconditional love, support and faith and to whom no acknowledgment can do adequate justice.

My respondents, without whose support and cooperation, this study would not have been possible.

--Parvathi K. Iyer