ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I offer my sincere gratitude to Professor Swarnalata Das, the teacher I was honored and privileged to have had as my supervisor. Her exceptional guidance, inspiration and encouragement lead me to completion of the work.

Much appreciation goes to the Head of the department Professor Gayatree Goswamee and other respected faculty members of the department of education for the sincere help and cooperation received during my research work.

I am also thankful to the Principals, teacher educators, librarians and specially the B.Ed. students of the respective colleges of teacher education for their cooperation in collection of the data.

I express my gratitude to the UGC (NERO) for offering me the fellowship and also my parent institution Goreswar College for cooperation in completion of the research work.

In the study report, many publications of other researchers and institutions have been liberally used. Though required acknowledgement of the sources has been made, any omission of any kind is regretted.

There are many people along my path that were supportive and helpful especially, my family members Dr. A. C. Das, Srijani and Kokil, brothers and sister without whom I would not have had the rhythm or reason.

Additionally, I want to remember the blessings of the departed souls of my dear parents whose everlasting inspiration made my endeavor a success.
