ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I would like to thank my supervisor Prof. Harish Trivedi for encouraging and facilitating research in an area as complex as the one undertaken here, and for seeing the work through its various stages over the years. When I started on this project, it was still unusual in the Department of English to be working on the kind of interdisciplinary and bilingual materials I have employed here. For having the confidence in my abilities to handle its vast scope, I thank him. I would also like to thank senior Professors and colleagues at the department, especially Prof. Alok Rai, Dr. Manju Jain and Dr. Udaya Kumar for their moral and intellectual support over the years. Prof. Sumanyu Satpathy and Prof. Sambuddha Sen as Heads of Department and Dr. Baidik Bhattacharyya have been most cooperative at various stages.

This work would not have been possible without the Study Leave that Lady Shri Ram College for Women granted me from 2004 -2007. I thank Principal Meenakshi Gopinath and my colleagues at the Department of English at LSR for their encouragement and support.

The Indian Institute of Advanced Study, Simla, where I was an Associate between 2004 and 2007, provided an environment conducive for research. At Simla, Mrs. Vidya Stokes shared materials on Satyanand Stokes and Fellows such as Dr. Bettina Beumer and other fellow Associates at the IIAS helped me think through some of my ideas at a nascent stage.

The Charles Wallace Trust grant allowed me to read archival materials at the India Office Collection at the British Library in London in July-August 2005. I thank the Trust’s Secretary Richard Alford for his warmth and assistance. The Cornelia Sorabji Collection housed at the India Office constitutes the core of my chapter on her. Her nephew, Prof. Richard Sorabji, generously shared a meal and some materials with me when I approached him at Oxford. I was also able to access the library at SOAS as also Bodleian Library at Oxford for some rare materials pertaining to the Raj. I must acknowledge the University Grants Comission’s grant which facilitated the travel. Manuscripts at the Nehru Memorial Museum and Library’s archives, the Sahitya Akademi Library, the National Library, Calcutta, as well as LSR’s own collection of books provided excellent resources. I thank their staff for their ready help on all occasions.

For sharing their personal collections and recollections so generously, I thank the Sankrityayan family, especially the late Mrs. Kamala Sankrityayan, who opened her home in Darjeeling for four days of intense reading and conversation in 2006. Jeta Sankrityayan and Jaya Parhawk have been constant sources of information on their father’s extraordinary life and works. Thanks are also due to Ashok Elwin and Mrs. Lila Elwin, Shillong, for allowing me access to unpublished materials, and to Sanjoy Hazarika for facilitating my visit in 2010 and for sharing insights on issues relating to Elwin and the North East on several occasions. The late Gandhian Shri Ravindra Varma whom I first met at a Gandhi Vichar Camp at Wardha in 2005, which set off this exploration, Radha Bhatt-ji, Neema Vaishnav and David Bhai of Lakshmi Ashram, Kausani, and Anil Nauriya in Delhi have been indispensable to my understanding of Sarala Devi, Gandhi, and the Indian National Movement over the years. I remember with gratitude some precious conversations in December 2006 with the late Ramchandra Gandhi (Ramu Gandhi) which gave me fresh perspectives on Gandhi and Svaraj, and I thank Prof. Tridip Suhrud for generously sharing with me several unpublished articles on Gandhi.

Friends Nandini Sharma, Anjali Bhatia, Vasudha Pande, Aseem Shrivastava, Svati Joshi, Manas Ray, Tarun Saint, Madhu Grover, Raj Bhatt and many others: thank you for being there in so many ways, through good times and bad. My family, especially my mother, who has waited patiently and long to see the completion of this project, cannot be thanked enough. Finally, I remember my father, the late Prof. Lal Mani Joshi, a constant inspiration, to whose memory I dedicate this work.

While I am thankful to all who have helped me with this work, all errors that remain are mine alone.
