ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

It has taken three and a half years for this research conducted by me to reach its completion. This period of time has helped me grow as a researcher, as a student and equally as a person. I have learnt many things during the entire journey; collecting data, reading through journals and solving the myriads of puzzles in data and result analyses.

My heartiest gratitude goes to my supervisor, Prof. Gopa Bhardwaj for accepting my request to guide me, showing faith in my capabilities, trusting my intentions and, most importantly, holding high the lamp that helped me pave a successful course in my endeavour of a fulfilling research. She has always been there for all my amateur questions, buzzing ideas and funny suggestions. She has made me understand the importance of originality in one’s self as well as one’s work. Her support and guidance has given me strength not only to complete this research but also to be a self driven person.

I would also like to express my gratitude for the advisors of the present research, Prof. Anand Prakash and Prof. N.K. Chadha, who have helped me raise various barriers that I faced during the journey and also guided me in various arenas.

I thank all participant public/government sector organisations for having faith in me and my work, thence permitting me to collect precious data from their employees. I appreciate all participant employees for showing keen interest in the study and putting their time and effort at eagerly listening to me and filling questionnaires. Those who voluntarily came forward to give an interview deserve a special mention as that encouraged and helped me develop enthusiasm in the research. I specially appreciate and thank those participants who shared and narrated personal experiences relating to the topic that help me ground my research work on reality.
Close friends and their families have also helped me reach my goal. A few I would like to mention here are Dr. Sunil Verma, Mr. Saif Rehman Farooqi, Ms. Divya Sharma, Mr. H.S. Rattan and Ms. Kusum Gautam. Their support has been incessant. They are appreciable for their presence at difficult times during this research.

Finally, I would like to thank my family for inspiring, motivating, encouraging and pushing me for success. They have been the force behind this research as they showed faith in my abilities and gave me courage to take it up. Despite of choosing such a sensitive research topic I was able to handle it well due to their display of interest in and importance of it.
