ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

In writing the thesis from which this study evolved, I am really lucky to have Prof. Girijesh Pant as my supervisor during the course of this work. Throughout the study he has been a constant source of inspiration to me. He not only rendered help educationally but also in deep financial crisis and emboldened my spirit to carry forward my work. He has also always tried to clear of my doubts and confusions. My thanks are due to the present and former Deans, Prof. Zafar Imam, Prof. G.P. Deshpande, Prof. S.K. Das and Prof. I.N. Mukherji, School of International Studies, who has been given me a chance for research work. I would like to take the opportunity to acknowledge Prof. Gulshan Dietl, as a chairperson, who had given opportunities me in every possible way throughout this work. I wish to thank my colleagues, Ms. Suchdeva, Ms. Kapur and all staff of my centre for maintaining the working atmosphere in the centre. A special note of thanks to Dr. Tabassum Jamal who is a scientist at NISTADS for their valuable suggestions. I acknowledge with gratitude Mr. Mange Ram (Commercial Attache) and Mr. Ravi Joshi (Education & Technical Councillors Indian high commission to Kenya) for the arrangement made for me to go to the Hilton Hotel and introduced to various business organization of East Africa and Gujarat delegations especially. In the Kenya Industrial Research & Development Institute (KIRDI), I am particularly grateful to Dr. H.L. Kanne, Director of KIRDI, and Dr. F.M. Mohindi as an economist in the KIRDI for the opportunity I had of listening to their view on the activities of the research programme in the fields of S&T and cooperation and collaboration between regions, especially India and East Africa policy and implications of the subject. I further thank Charles Muturi for their kind cooperation and help.

My special thanks to Sh. Dinesh Abrol for his thought provoking suggestions, guidance, and financial support, he had given me as a familiar atmosphere. His valuable cooperation and for allowing me to use their computer facility without which it was not possible to complete Thesis work. No words would be sufficient to express my gratitude towards him for his continuous support, encouragement and guidance. I have a deep sense of gratitude from the core of my heart for Ms. Usha
Menon, who behaved with me like a guardian and helped me in every aspect. She was always there when I needed her. Her helping gesture and jovial nature shall always be remembered. I am also greatly indebted to com. Brinda Karat, Dr. Murli Manohar Prasad Singh, Gauhar Raza and Surjeet Singh on this occasion who guided my personal life as a comradely.

I also take this opportunity to thank my parents who always keep me away from family affairs and provide me a free mind to carry forward my work and they have always given unlimited love and support in all possible ways.

While writing this Thesis sometimes I was lost in the blind alleys of life, but saved from the brink of dejection and despair with just the thought Shakti who has been / is steel / will be my source of consolation.

Finally, I express my gratitude to Shri Ashok Kumar Chaudhary, who typed the work in its final form.

This work was written in a purely academic environment, and the arguments, ideas, conclusions, and recommendations are entirely my own, as are the general interpretations and views expressed in the Thesis.
