ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Completion of thesis is a moment of convergence of many strands of memory. Possibly that is the best moment for acknowledging debts that I have incurred in the gradual development of my academic life.

I have benefited a lot through exchanges with my friends from Calcutta Abhijit Banerjee, Arijit Basu, Amlan and Aditi Dasgupta, Kunal Chatterjee and Nandini Gooptu. Prashant Mishra, a friend from a different walk of life always stood by me during the most critical phases of research in Calcutta. Ananda Bhattacharya was always helpful in locating sources and documents in the archives and libraries.

My brother Uddalok, who lives in Delhi, has ungrudgingly offered any help that was required at any moment. Presence of my uncle and aunt Dipak and Manju Basu always gave me the confidence to stay and work in Delhi. Professor Tapas Majumdar and Gauri Majumdar were a source of affection and encouragement. Bharat Shekhar, a former student of our Centre was, and is, a great support. He and other friends like Jayant Kumar, Neeraj Labh and Shyam Narayan Lal were occasionally used for checking the validity of my ideas. My apologies to them.

Goa, the place where I live, have friends with whom interaction was always a pleasure. Warmth, wit and wisdom of Peter DeSouza kept me alive through many stressful days. N. Jayaram and Alito Sequeira generously helped in preparing draft chapters. I would not have received an important document but for the timely procurement of it by Manish Thakur. Koshy Tharakkan and K. Subhash have been the most supportive friends. To say that Gurunandan and Anita Bhat had helped me in some way while I was doing my research would be the grossest understatement of the year. Thanks only to Aparajita Ganguly and Rahul Tripathi I could prepare the final draft on time.

My colleagues in the Department spared me for two whole years to engage in research work, and shared the burden of my workload. My thanks are due to Pratima
Kamat, N. Shyam Bhat and Nagendra Rao. Fr. M.C. Pius and Venugopalan Nair have enthusiastically supported my research activities. Last, but not the least, I express immense gratitude and thanks to Prof. K.M. Mathew, former Head of the Department, for piloting my study leave application almost like his own personal project.
