Contents

Acknowledgments
i-iii

Conventions
vi

INTRODUCTION
1

I. Sufi Tale and Rajput Heroism in Medieval Avadh

Introduction; The plot; Manuscripts of the Padmavat and issues of transmission; The poet in history; Reception and questions of genre; A ‘tale of love’; A Sufi ‘tale of love’; Competitive mystical transactions; Gender in the Sufi ‘tale of love’; Historicizing the Padmavat’s audiences; The politics of recasting contemporary history; Patrons, audiences, and their norms; Multi-layered resolutions: Sufis, politics and patriarchy; Conclusion.

II. Kingship in Crisis in Medieval Rajasthan

Introduction; Language and literary traditions; Problems of genre; The authors; ‘Caran’ traditions and their transmission; Jains and Rajputs in late medieval Rajasthan; ‘Jain’ narrative traditions; Transitions in state formation; Rajput patriarchy and the state; Pressures and contradictions in the Rajput order; The narratives of Padmini: Kings and chiefs; Queens and wives; Threats to the order; A Jain poem outside Rajasthan; Conclusion.

III. James Tod and the Recasting of Rajput History

Introduction; Tod and his sources; Sources; Assembling the Annals: the interpretation of local sources; The shape of history: European moorings; Overlapping Contexts: Enlightenment, Romantic, Orientalist; Materials for history: myth, epic, heroic poetry; Histories old and new; The altered context; Regional crisis; The importance of Rajputana; Kings, Chiefs and Company policy; Rajput patriarchy and the Company; Common enemies; The Padmini story; Tod’s account; The story collated; The story recast: Kings and chiefs; The story edited: Queens old and new; The story re-coloured: Surviving enemies; Conclusion.
IV. REFashionED TRADITIONS AND EXEMPLARY PATRIOTISM IN COLONIAL BENGAL

Introduction; The bhadralok and colonialism; The uses of the past; The 'nation' and its limits; reformed patriarchies, reconstructed histories; Aesthetics and audiences; Reformed languages, redefined communities; Histories and fictions; Alternative traditions; The texts; The nation, its heroes and the enemy; Queen, hostage and goddess; Conclusion.

CONCLUSION

APPENDICES: TRANSLATIONS

Hemratan, Gora Badal Padmini Katha Caupai
Chitor Udaipur Patnama
Yajneshwar Bandopadhyay, Mibar
Abanindranath Thakur, Padmini, Rajkahini

BIBLIOGRAPHY