ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This section of the thesis gives me an opportunity to express my sincere gratitude to everyone, who has very kindly and generously helped me reach this stage. Writing this section also finally marks an end of a significant chapter in my academic journey, which commenced with my enrolment for the Masters course in JNU.

Dr. Jayal has supervised my M. Phil. as well as the present work. She accepted me as her student when I was not capable of either speaking or writing properly. The present work appears in a presentable form, due to her supervision. I sincerely express my gratitude to Dr. Jayal, for everything she has done for me.

I take this opportunity to respectfully express my indebtedness to Prof. C. P. Bhambhri for his unlimited kindness and unexpected understanding, at the time when I needed it the most and it ran out of stock from the places, where I was 'absolutely sure' to find some. I guess this is called life in the real world. I would always remain indebted to Prof. Bhambhri for his kindness, which acted as a life saving anchor.

I respectfully and sincerely express my indebtedness to Prof. Kuldeep Mathur for not only introducing me to the subject of natural resources but also kindly providing me with an invaluable opportunity to understand it as well. His keen and honest interest in my work has always encouraged me to work harder and perform. I am indebted to Prof. Anil K. Gupta and Dr. Vijay S. Chand for opening up the windows of my mind. Prof. Gupta’s guidance during the summer school in June 2000 primarily helped me in framing and finalizing the development performance indicators and the questionnaire for this study. All the imperfections that are still left in this study are only due to my own shortcomings. Prof. Gupta has always encouraged me to think and work harder. I would always remain indebted to him for making me a curious researcher, which I also enjoy being the most.

For me the doctoral program at JNU provided one of the invaluable opportunities to acquire knowledge and experiences based on academic research. Here, I take the opportunity to express my appreciation and indebtedness to the entire CPS faculty for accepting me as their student.

I am indebted to Mr Mathur and Mr Singh, the project-implementing officers for their kind and generous cooperation, which helped me in completing the work on schedule. They even became my tourist guides in exploring the city of Ajmer and its surroundings. I have learned a lot from both these officers. They are the best in their field. In fact they are the ones who work hard at the grassroots level, in tough circumstances without expecting any personal recognition for the works they do. They would always remind me of one simple truth that honesty and hard work may not be in fashion today, but those who follow it are certainly able to breathe easy.
I am indebted to Sh. Ramdev ji, Sh. Bhagwan ji, Sh. Champa lal, and Sh. Suleman Mughal for introducing me to the villages and villagers, while kindly and patiently answering my never ending queries. These acts of graciousness were not done in an expectation of receiving any reciprocal benefit, thus making them so special and unforgettable. Sh. Suleman Mughal gave up his five days of daily wages to just accompany me, despite of so many requests from me and lalit that we will manage on our own. He also refused to accept anything in return. He only agreed to accept his photograph that I have taken. I could never repay them back.

I am indebted to all my respondents who took time out of their busy and tough lives to answer my questions. These questions selfishly expected them to talk about their lives without giving anything in return. They never once refused to answer my queries, when they could have in fact should have simply said NO. On the contrary, they welcomed my queries and me with beautiful smiles, interest and curiosity. And, all this happened when they were tense on their personal levels, due to inadequate rains as well as many other personal problems. I would always remember them and remain indebted to their generosity, kindness, honesty, dignity and patience with which they answered my selfish queries. I enjoyed there home made delicacies, prepared in traditional ways. I particularly enjoyed eating bhuttas and fresh green beans from their fields. Their method of preparing bhuttas is much better than the one we have in the cities.

I am grateful to lalit, my jeep driver for generously sharing his vast and rich experience of 7-8 years in the field with me; while also helping me complete the field study, which was not a part of his job description. He is also an innovator in his own right. I am grateful to Rajasthan Tourism Development's guesthouse for their perfect and hospitable services. They made my final trip alone, so safe and tension free, for my parents and me.

I am grateful to the library staff of JNU, Nehru Memorial Museum and Library, IIPA, Ratan Tata and IDS library for their invaluable assistance. The staff members at IIPA and Teen Murti libraries have always gone beyond their spheres to help me. I believe that is the reason why I enjoy reading in these libraries. Infact I read about Prof. Sen's capability approach, for the first time in Teen Murti. I remember that it took me an entire day to understand his approach and then the joy I experienced of at last finding something so relevant is still indescribable. Books talk to me and I enjoy reading and analyzing them. This is also the one thing, which sometimes displeases my mom about me that I can not resist enhancing my collection. I am indebted to all the books and their authors, who have always enhanced my knowledge base. I wish that my friendship with books would always go on.

I am indebted to Mr. Partha Sarthi Guha of Electra Photo Studio, JNU for not only giving the presentation look to the thesis, but also for being a kind and honest friend in the hour of need.

There are so many more people who have kindly offered me their time, knowledge, experience, advice during my academic journey. I take this opportunity to thank them all, because without them this work would have never reached its destination, Thank you.
My sister, Mallika is the sweetest person I know. She is the realist, knows the world better than me. Her concern and constant support is invaluable. I wish that I could adhere her qualities, which make her a survivor in this cruel world.

My papa and mummy are certainly the best parents in this entire universe. They have always been lovingly supportive, understanding, kind, unbiased and honest towards me. They have never tried to hide my inadequacies from me or anyone else, thus always treating me with respect and dignity. They have stood by me only when they believed that I am not wrong, thus giving me the only reason to believe that I am on the right track and should continue. Papa accompanied me to most of my field studies. He even used to enter into conversations with many people to improve my understanding on the subject. Papa has developed an active interest in the issues related with wildlife, water resources and villagers to just continuously update my knowledge base. These words could never express my feelings for them. I just want to say that today the only fact that truly makes me feel proud, happy and right about myself is that I am their daughter. I wish they could also say the same about me some day, soon.

God has been my constant companion come rain or shine. Like, my parents' god has always stood by me. Walking with me, talking to me, picking me up whenever I fall, showing me hope in the situation of despair, stopping me from committing mistakes, particularly when I was all ready to quit. God has been so kind and generous to my parents and me, that again words seems acutely inadequate to express my feelings.

Inspite of receiving guidance and help from everyone, this study continues to be infected with many flaws, and all those are due to my own inadequacies, for which I sincerely apologize.

I lovingly dedicate this work to my parents and my god because without them it was like a dream, I would not have even dared to dream about, leave alone attempting and completing it, today.

Nayanika Singh.
