Acknowledgements

I would like to express my deepest gratitude to my supervisor Dr. Swaran Singh. He is an excellent supervisor who has given generously to me in terms of both his time and his knowledge.

My sincere gratitude also goes to Prof. Varun Sahni, Allison Macfarlane, Marie Isabelle Chevrier and Manorama Upadhyaya. Their valuable observations, inputs and directions were critical for my research project.

I would also like to thank those who consented to be interviewed. All were very generous with their time and knowledge. Particular mention should be given to Jozef Goldblat, Jean Pascal Zanders, Robin Coupland, Richard Leanne, Ottorino Cosivi, Piers Millet, Kathryn Mclaughlin, Caitriona Mcleish, Alastair Hay, Malcolm Dando and Simon Whitby. Likewise Julian P. Robinson deserves special mention for answering my questions, offering encouraging words of advice and allowing me exclusive access to the Harvard Sussex Programme Archives.

I am grateful to Mrs. and Mr. Jayant Prasad, Ambassador and Permanent Representative of India to the Conference on Disarmament, Geneva, for their hospitality during my stay at Geneva and also for their continuous encouragement for my research.

My thanks to Satyabrat for patiently listening to my problems and giving advice on dealing with work pressure.

A very special thank you to Shailesh and Asha. Their input as a result of the discussions was very encouraging and beneficial for my research.

As with so many other areas of my life my family has given me their unconditional support. I would like to especially thank my grandparents, my parents and my brother for the role they have played and the support they have given to me.

(Monalisa Joshi)