In the journey called life...

We come across many people,

some for some reason,

some for some reason

and some become a part for a lifetime...

A Ph.D. tests not only one's command over the subject, but a lot more than that. Now that the thesis is complete and I have the luxury to look back, I thank almighty for all the love and support I have had during this time to see me through all the ups and downs of my life.

No acknowledgment can ever begin without thanking my parents. Ma, Baba, thanks for being there as always and sacrificing your dreams to see my dreams come true. Thank you Minitu for being not just a brother but also a good friend and strong moral support of mine. I am indeed very lucky to have you as a brother.

I take this opportunity to thank Animesh Sir for the invaluable lessons and guidance that helped me to reach JNU.

I would like to express my heartfelt gratitude to my Supervisor, Prof. Kasturi Datta, for introducing me to the exciting world of Hyalomana. These past seven years, under her watchful guidance, have been the most enriching years of my life. She has been a hard task master, always pushing the envelope a little further and urging me towards perfectionism. Yet, miles away from home, I have also found in her a motherly figure who I knew wanted to bring out the best in me.

A word of thanks to the present and the previous Deans for allowing me to use the facilities of the school for my research work. The financial grants by CSIR are duly acknowledged.
Many thanks are due to Ilona Di for her multitasking abilities. She has been my Co-supervisor, friend and counsellor who always strictly guides us on the right path and also takes great care of the interest of the students. Sometimes her mere presence has made things look a lot easier.

Thank you Aniruddha Da for being my mentor. I shall remain eternally grateful to you and Jaideep Da for introducing me to the "lab" and explaining me what a Ph.D. is all about. I couldn't have reached here without your support. I have been fortunate to have wonderful seniors in the form of Anindya and Arupama Di and colleagues like Rachna, Shubhra and Kaustuv in the laboratory.

No words of gratitude will be enough to thank Shubhra, my colleague, for her immense help in compiling this thesis. Shubhra, you are a gem of a person! I am sincerely thankful to Paramita and Kaustuv for all their help in more ways than one in accomplishing my Ph.D work, both on bench and in draft. I owe you guys a lot.

Sanjay, Prasad and Arif have been extremely helpful juniors. Sanjay has been very resourceful in supplying buffers and reagent solutions while Prasad's and Arif's labor skills have been a blessing in disguise.

The family picture of lab # 103 would remain incomplete without the mention of Devi Singh ji, who has always been there to help us in the research work as well as official paraphernalia.

During my stay in JNU, particularly over the last 4-5 years, one person who has always been by my side through the thick and thin, through all pleasantries and the not so pleasant moments, is my dearest friend Veena, who shall always remain a breath of fresh air in my life. Having shared with her the funniest, gloomiest, brightest and the darkest moments of my life during this period, I can't even imagine a life in JNU without her. Just the thought that we are always there for each other is so comforting.

Shruti Di, my senior at the department and who was also my hostel mate, has been a darling elder sister to me. I could speak my heart out to her and she always smilingly bore with my whims. Shruti Di and Shilpa Di really made me feel at home in 'Ganga Hostel' which has truly been my home away from home.
Two very special buddies of mine, Aparna and Neha have always been so nice to me, keeping me cheerful even in despair. Words fail to express my gratitude for their immense help during compilation of the thesis.

My friends in and outside the department command a special mention for making JNU what it is today. Geetika, Srila, Mandira, Shankho, Anand and definitely have made my stay in JNU really beautiful. Geetika holds a special place amongst my friends.

My department seniors Anurag Sir, Gurmeet Sir and juniors Rajesh, Alok and Chander deserve a special mention. They have always been there to solve all technical as well as non-technical problems that might have bogged me down. A special thanks to Anurag Sir for providing me ‘door-to-door’ conveyance on hot sultry days.

Not just the students, the SES department itself holds a very place in my heart. This department has actually given me an identity in JNU. Though only once a year, but feels like ‘Earth Day’ and the Fresher’s Welcome functions are rejoicing occasions for which I, and surely many other students, wait eagerly. A special thanks to Alok, Chander and everyone involved for making my last ‘Earth Day’ in SES so special.

Thank you Yuvraj Bhaiya for taking such good care of us all during those tiring working hours. I will always cherish those steaming cups of tea, coffee and snacks that you brought unwashed.

I am really thankful to my husband Abhijet for his understanding and unfailing support through the tough times of accomplishing the thesis draft. I am indeed blessed to have such considerate life partner.

Finally, when I reflect upon the past 7-8 years of my life in JNU, I do realize that the path has not been absolutely smooth. I have had some great moments, met some wonderful people and also faced some set backs, but I guess that is what life is all about!! But whatever said and done, I can say for sure that “...those were the best days of my life...!!”
