The increasing importance given to Political Violence by Social Scientists at home and abroad, inspired me to embark on this empirical research in the context of society in Kerala.

I am immensely grateful to my guide Prof. Jayanti K. Patel, of the Political Science Department in the School of Social Sciences, Gujarat University, who inspired and encouraged me in this difficult topic for research. Special gratitude is due to his candid suggestions and comments which have helped me throughout this study.

I must also acknowledge the personal encouragement and help of Prof. P.N. Sheth and Prof M.J. Desai. Special thanks are also due to Prof. Dinesh Shukla who helped me in obtaining materials of study.

My special gratitude to Prof. S.Mukherjee and Prof. Vidyut Joshi of the Gandhi Labour Institute, whose valuable suggestions and comments helped a lot in the various stages of research.

The completion of this work would not have been possible without the co-operation of the students with whom I interacted to collect data. Along with them, I am also indebted to many scholars, friends, relatives, who lent helping hands during survey and provided me with essential materials for the study.

Last but not the least, I am indebted to my husband and son without whose moral support and co-operation I could not have completed this research work.
