I have the privilege of working under the supervision of two doyens of Indian scholarship on South Asian Affairs -- late Prof. Urmila Phadnis (until her demise on 29 October 1990) and Prof. S.D. Muni (since then). It was their constant encouragement and help that enabled me to complete the present study.

My four year long academic association with Prof. Phadnis was an asset. With her profound sense of dedication to academics, she provided me the inspiration to develop my academic interests. I could refine my perspectives on the theme of the present study through several discussions with her. She corrected the first draft of my thesis and gave several useful suggestions to improve it. Besides, she was immensely helpful to me during the days of my struggle in JNU without adequate means to pursue my research. For all these, I am very much indebted to her and as a token of gratitude, I dedicate this work to my beloved teacher.

The completion of the present work could not have been possible but for the encouragement, help and sympathy of Prof. Muni. He not only provided me a chance to complete the thesis under his expertise supervision after Prof. Phadni's death, but also did not object to the framework of the present study which I evolved under the guidance of my first supervisor. Despite his tight academic engagements, Prof. Muni found time to read the entire draft twice. With his useful suggestions and constructive criticism, he contributed insights and perspectives which added much to the final version of the present work. To him, I express my heartfelt gratitude.

Prof. M.S. Rajan, under whom I am currently working as Research Assistant, deserves my special thanks. He has been a constant source of inspiration and support and I could learn a lot about research from him. The submission of thesis would have been delayed further but for the generous leave which he granted me to complete this work. My thanks are due to other faculty members of the South Asian Division of the School of International Studies, especially Prof. J.N. Mukherjee, who always enquired about the progress of my thesis. I acknowledge the help rendered by Prof. Suryanarayan of University of Madras in collecting material in Madras.

Mr. R.R. Sivalingam of the Repatriates' Rehabilitation Research and Information Centre, Coimbatore, was kind enough to send me various issues of the journal Exodus at free of cost. Ms. Selvi and Dr. Vedavalli of Madras University were helpful to me in data collection. I remain beholden to them.

Several political leaders and bureaucrats of Sri Lanka enlightened me on the problems of Indian Tamils in the island viz. Hon. J.R. Jayewardene (former President), Hon. Sirimavo Bandaranaike (former Prime Minister), Hon. S. Thondaman (President, CWC and Minister of Rural Industries and Tourism), Hon. Sellasamy (General Secretary, CWC and Minister of State for Transport), Hon. Devaraja (President, CLF and Minister of State for Hindu Religious Affairs), Mr. Vasudeva Nanayakkara (leader of the Nava Sama Samaja Party), Mr. Chandrasekharan (leader of the Up-country People's Front), Mr. Shanmugadasan (leader of the Communist Party [Peking]), Mr. V.P. Ganesan (General Secretary, DWC) and Mr. W.T. Jayasinghe (former Controller of Emigration and Immigration and currently, Secretary in the Cabinet Secretariat). I must thank all of them for having patiently answered my questions during my interviews with them in Colombo.

During my field trip to Colombo, many individuals wholeheartedly helped me in several ways. A special mention should be made of Dr. Kanesalingam, Executive Governor of Marga Institute, Colombo, who granted me the permission to use the institute library. Mr. Gurjeet Singh (First Secretary in the Indian High Commission in Colombo) helped me in getting appointments with some of the Sri Lankan leaders as well as locating research material in Colombo. Mrs. Neeru Singh (Second Secretary in the Indian High Commission in Colombo) and Mr. Buriya (Assistant High Commissioner for India in Kandy) made available to me the data on the grant of citizenship to the stateless people and their repatriation to India. Mr. Casie Shetty (Director, South Asian Division, Foreign Affairs Ministry of Sri Lanka) introduced me to bureaucrats who had dealt with the Indian Tamil problem. Fr. Paul Caspersz of Satyodaya, a voluntary organisation based in Kandy, provided me all necessary help to collect material in Kandy. Mr. Ray Forbes, Director of the Bandaranaike Centre for International Studies (BCIS), Colombo, permitted me to use the library. And, Ms. Kalaimagal of the CLF willingly assisted me in data collection. I am thankful to all of them.

My thanks are due to librarians and staff of the libraries of the Marga Institute under Ms. Hema Geethananda, Colombo University, Centre for Society and Religion, BCIS and Satyodaya. I must also acknowledge the help of Prof. Bastiampillai (Colombo University), Dr. Sivaraja and family, Mr. Ranganathan and family, Mr. Thavaraja and several friends at Marga Institute.

I am grateful to several friends in JNU who wholeheartedly helped me at the final stage of my thesis. A special mention must be made of Mr. Tissainayakam who read and re-read the entire thesis and corrected the language, besides making constructive criticism and useful suggestions for the improvement of the draft. So was the help rendered by Messrs. Rakesh Batabyal, Trilok Nath Mishra and S. P. Thangavelu. Mr. K.K. Tripathi assisted me in tabulation work. Ms. Padma did the tedious job of transcribing the interviews of the Sri Lankan leaders. Much needed moral support to me was given by Priya, Rekha, Mohan, Fazil, Suresh, Murugesan, Ramki.
I must thank Mr. Muralidharan, Mrs. Shyamala and Mr. Suresh for their meticulous typing of the script. Mrs. Lakshmi deserves my thanks for her hospitality.

Last, but not the least, I am grateful to my beloved parents, sisters and other family members who bore the pain of my long absence from home.

Needless to say, whatever shortcomings may exist in this work are all mine.

Qahem
