This study deals with the process of urbanization in Gujarat and its impact on the growth of large cities within the ambit of their economic structures. My initial interest in the subject was first kindled while I was doing post-graduate studies at the School of Planning, Ahmedabad, and subsequently deepened during the course of my career with the Town Planning and Valuation Department of the Government of Gujarat. What prompted me to do my dissertation work in the area is the realization that no serious attempt had been made to understand the size-structure-growth relationship of cities while designing the urbanization policy in the State. I hope that this study makes a small contribution towards closing the gap in our understanding of the region-specific features of the urbanization process in Gujarat.

My deepest sense of gratitude is to Professor K.K. Subrahmanian, who supervised the work. Not only he helped me in gaining and understanding the economic dimensions of the urbanization process but also encouraged me in the pursuit of research. Dr. B N Vishwanath and Dr. S.P. Kashyap spared time for fruitful discussions. I benefitted immensely, and am indebted to them.
Though the data base for the work is mostly secondary, the task of collection from scattered sources/agencies in the State was made easier by the cooperation I received from the officials and in particular, from Shri. C. Banerjee, Secretary, Urban Development and Housing; Shri. M.B. Trivedi, Chief Inspector of Factories; and Shri. D.C. Pandya, Chief Town Planner, Town Planning and Valuation Department, Government of Gujarat. I also take this opportunity to thank Shri B.V. Desai, Dean Emeritus, Centre for Environmental Planning and Technology and Director of the Vastu-shilpa Foundation for the encouragement for the work.

The Sardar Patel Institute of Economic and Social Research extended administrative and library support. I could also take advantage of the facilities at the School of Planning. I am grateful to the authorities of these institutions.

My friends Shri. H.M. Shivanand Swamy, Miss. Neela Shukla and Shri. Nandakishore Farikh, to mention a few, rendered assistance at various stages of the work and kept me in good humour. Shri. C.I. Augustin gracefully took the trouble of typing out the manuscript at a very short-notice. I thank them and so also many other friends who in one way or other helped in my research endeavour.

Finally, I am indebted to my brother Shri. K.V. Bhanujan who always evinced a keen interest in my progress and particularly in academic pursuits.

While I place on record my thanks to all those who helped in the study, the responsibility for all errors and omissions rest entirely on me.
