ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This thesis is the result of the concerted efforts of many people who kept motivating me throughout. The contribution of Professor Abdul Nafey is the utmost and I must express my gratefulness for the dedication, warmth and commitment with which he has nurtured this project.

The entire family of Latin America Studies was there to encourage me. Professor R. Narayanan would always be eager to know about my progress and contribute positively with suggestions. Professor Jose Leal Ferreira of the Latin American Studies Division, Jawaharlal Nehru University gave me useful information from the Embassy of Brazil and whatever articles he could lay his hands pertaining to my research area was duly passed on to me. Professor R L Chawla was there to accompany me to JNU whenever I needed. He was a constant guide in providing the economic perspective of environmental policies. Dr. Vishnu Priya and Dr. Priti Singh were there on whom I could always bank for invaluable advice.

For providing funds, that enabled me to undertake a fruitful field trip to University of London, I thank the Jawaharlal Nehru University.

I would like to thank the library staff of Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi; the WWF Library, New Delhi; the Down to Earth, New Delhi, and the Indian Institute of Foreign Trade, New Delhi. The officials in the World Bank and Brazilian Embassy also need a mention.

The librarians at the Institute of Latin American Studies, Senate House Library and London School of Economics provided immense help and guidance. Useful resources were also available from the Institute of University of London Research Library Services (ULRLS).
Special mention needs to be made about Sarah Pink, Claire Shivlock and Alison Underhill at the Institute of Latin American Studies (ILAS), London.

Dr. James Dunkerely, Director, ILAS and Dr. Graham Woodgate passed me the addresses of some useful contacts in the field of ‘indigenous issues’. Dr. Fiona Macaulay, ILAS gave me useful interviews and insight on how to direct my research. Ms Denise Hamu, CEO, WWF Brazil provided me with useful handouts and brochure on ARPA and other WWF related activities for conservation of Amazon.

Professor Jose Leal Ferreira of the Latin American Studies Division, Jawaharlal Nehru University gave me useful information from the Embassy of Brazil and whatever articles he could lay his hands pertaining to my research area was duly passed on to me. Professor R L Chawla was there to accompany me to JNU whenever I needed. He was a constant guide in providing the economic perspective of environmental policies.

Aashwyn and Amaresh were always there to bug me and cheer me up. My parents need a special mention because they have been very supportive of my endeavour and I owe it to them wherever I stand today. I am beholden to my parents-in-law for motivating me to achieve this milestone. Smita, Parijat and Abhijat had firm belief in their sister’s potential and I would never let them down. Ajit, Vinita, Minakshi and Amrita were always there to egg me on.

Thanking Ranjit Kumar, who helped me in the typing work, becomes essential even though he played truant towards the end. Immense help was provided by Abhay Kumar and Satender Kumar (Ragho) for helping me in this endeavour.
