ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

I take this opportunity to express my profound gratitude and respect to my Ph.D. supervisor, Professor P. M. Kulkarni. This thesis would not have been possible without his encouragement, supervision and support from the preliminary to the concluding level. He enabled me to develop an understanding of the subject, research and his passions to bear with my limitations all through. He supported me as a teacher, guide and philosopher in whatever manner he could have. I shall remain indebted to him throughout my life.

I express deep gratitude to Professor M. D. Vemuri, Professor Padmini Pani, Professor Atul Sood, Professor Anuradha Banerjee and Professor Saraswati Raju of Centre for the Studies of Regional Development, JNU for their critical comments during the various phases of my Ph.D. work. I owe my deepest gratitude to Professor Minja K. Choe and Professor Retherford, of East West Centre (EWC), Hawaii and Professor Ronald R. Rindfuss, Professor David K. Guilkey and Professor Illene Speizer of University of North Carolina at Chappel Hill for their vital contribution and critical comments during my limited interactions with them at the EWC.

I am thankful to Mr K Varghese, Mrs Shish Kaur and Mr T Selvam for their support.

I am thankful to International Institute of Population Sciences (IIPS), Mumbai, Population Foundation of India (PFI), New Delhi and Kolkata Municipal Corporation (KMC) for extending their institutional support during literature, secondary and primary data collection.

How can I forget my Maa, Baba and Bhai? Without their support it would have not been possible for me to complete my field survey and Ph.D. Their emotional and mental support always encouraged me to pursue my Ph.D. all through these years. My In-Laws were supportive and encouraged me to work harder for my Ph. D, rather than engrossing me in to daily household chores, which is generally expected from a girl after her marriage.

I am indebted to my friends, L K Dwivedi, Gloria, Prerna, Sharad Dwivedi, Shweta for their continuous encouragement and mental support during last five years.
I thank NGO’s; CINI Aasha, Family Planning Association of India (FPAI), Kolkata, for their support during my primary data collection in the form of providing ready access to their community level health workers, which helped me to expedite the data collection process. I am obliged to all the participants who volunteered and offered their valuable time for my study. I render my special thanks to the families of Gurupada Das and Archana for making my stay at their house comfortable and lending a helping hand in navigating through the villages and enhancing my understanding of village’s social fabrication.

I owe my deepest gratitude to my husband Shiv Narayan Sidh for his mental and emotional support during these five years. He supported me in every stage of my research work and his healthy criticism helped me to improve further.

SHARMISTHA BASU