Acknowledgments

I would like to express my sincere and heartfelt gratitude to my Supervisor, esteemed Prof. R.S. Bawa, without whose motivation and guidance I would not have initiated and completed the research work. He is a guide, friend and philosopher in the true sense of the word. Even with his awfully busy schedule, he has always been a source of inspiration and guided me at every stage of the research. I am also very thankful to my Co-Supervisor, Dr. Sanjeev Gupta, who was always ready and eager to help me to successfully come to terms with the intricacies of the research work.

I am also obliged to all the worthy teachers of the Department of Economics of the Punjab School of Economics, Guru Nanak Dev University, for their invaluable suggestions regarding this research work.

I would also like to thank my husband who took a keen interest in the project and helped me actively in the collection of primary data. At every step his support and encouragement kept me going with a view to completing my study.

I must also acknowledge the immense contribution made by my friend Seema Saroj who helped me like the Pole Star in navigating my way all through the maze of the present study. Hers was an active involvement as she helped me in getting information on the subject from abroad as well.

I am also thankful to the staff of Jawaharlal Nehru University, the National Council of Applied Economic Research, New Delhi, and the Indian Council of Social Sciences Research, New Delhi, for their help in consulting the books and journals from their respective libraries.

I am also obliged to the Principal of my college, Dr. Satish Ahuja, for his wholehearted support and cooperation for accomplishing this mission.
