ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

A major endeavour such as this thesis would never have been completed without the guidance and support of many people and organisations. The completion of this thesis is a cause of celebration for me and I take this opportunity with much pleasure to thank all who have helped me through the course of my journey towards producing this thesis. First and foremost, my utmost gratitude goes to my thesis advisor, Dr. P.K.Priyan for his patience, concern and constant support. He has provided assistance and encouragement beyond my expectations. His insightful comments and suggestions have greatly improved the quality of my effort. His thoughtfulness ranges from as macro as the conceptual development to as micro as punctuation. His guidance has been important not only to my completion of the degree but also to my development as a matured scholar. I have and will always feel deeply indebted for his mentorship.

I would also like to thank Prof. Mulye and Prof. (Dr.) Vilas for their help and support. Without them this research initiative would not have begun.

I would like to express my gratitude to the other members of my thesis advisory committee: Prof. (Dr.) J S Panwar, Prof. (Dr.) H J Jani, Prof. (Dr.) Yogesh Joshi, Prof. (Dr.) R P Patel, Prof (Dr.). Darshna Dave; for much help with the research design and methodology during the committee review of the research proposal and especially to Prof. (Dr.) H J Jani for his statistical review and many other helpful comments. The contemplative comments by all these members have been a great help to classify and refine this thesis.

I am deeply obliged to Late Shri Vishnu Varshney, Managing Director, Gujarat Venture Finance Limited, Ahmedabad and his colleagues who have extended active co-operation by providing access to data of the entrepreneurs surveyed in the research.

I would also like to express my gratitude to all the venture capitalists across India and the entrepreneurs from Gujarat; who have showed willingness to participate in the survey and provided their valuable opinions. As venture capital investment data are considered to be confidential in nature, without their readiness to share these details, this piece of work would not have seen the light of the day but for their responses.

I am especially grateful to all my colleagues and friends, especially Ms. Rachna and Ms. Mala, without whom this process would have been much less pleasant. Their advice and constructive criticism have been invaluable and their friendship is always cherished. Their shoulders to cry on, their ideas to count on and their laughter to share, have made this effort a joy.

My special thanks to the librarians of Indian Institute of Management, Ahmedabad; and especially to K S School of Business Management (Ms. Indira). She took a special care to pass on every single piece of information on venture capital and entrepreneurship to me. The resources at IIM, Ahmedabad library were truly the treasure of knowledge and information for this research. Access to all international and national journals on venture capital and entrepreneurship is greatly admired without which the literature review may not have been possible in depth.

I would have never embarked on this Ph.D. journey if I had not received the endurance, confidence, appreciation and support of my family. My in-laws, parents and sister have always been a source of inspiration and encouragement. Having the support of the family is a very valuable asset and one I have truly treasured. I wish to thank them all for their love, support, affection, understanding and patience that has brought me this far.

Finally, I owe my loving thanks to my husband, Dr. Kunal Soni, who has lived the experience with me through these weekend-less years. His understanding and supportive nature have made the tedious life much more tolerable. He has made countless sacrifices so that I could complete this thesis. I dedicate this thesis to my family- I am sure the best is yet to come!!! Thank you for everything.
