The main sources of mathematical invention seem to be within man rather than outside of him, his own inveterate and insatiable curiosity, his constant itching for intellectual adventure and likewise the main obstacles to mathematical progress also seem to be within himself, his scandalous laziness and inertia, his fear of adventure, his need of conformity to old standards and his obsession by mathematical ghosts.

- SARTON
FORWARDED

P. L. Sharma

(DR. P. L. SHARMA)
SUPERVISOR
Prof. & Head of the Department of Mathematics & Statistics,
University of Saugar, SAGAR.