ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I would like to express my sincere gratitude to Dr. N. Thillainayagam, Ph.D., M.C.D., D.R.S., Dean of Social Sciences and the Head of the Department of Rural Industries and Management, Gandhigram Rural Institute, my research supervisor and guide for the inspiration given to me and his encouraging guidance throughout the process of preparation of the thesis. But for his systematic approach, this extensive research could not have been completed.

My words of gratitude to the Vice-Chancellor of Gandhigram Rural Institute Dr. (Mrs.) G. Pankajam who had provided profuse support to the Research scholars.

I am in search of words to express my enormous gratitude to The secretary Shri. K. Santhanam, National College Council, Tiruchirappalli who had magnanimously supported me throughout my studies, but for whose understanding support, this endeavour could not have been possible.

I owe profuse gratitude to Dr. (Mrs.) K. Meena, Principal, Shrimathi Indira Gandhi College, Tiruchirappalli, whose leadership had personally inspired me to accomplish this venture. She stood as a firm example of perseverance, self-confidence and success.

I am very much indebted to Dr. N. Kannan Nair and Sri R. Seerangarajan Senior faculty members of the department of RIM and other faculty members of the department for their constant inspiration, encouragement and guidance throughout the period of my study.

I wish to acknowledge my profuse gratitude to Dr. A. Pandurangan, HOD of Statistics, Periyar EVR College, Tiruchirappalli, who by his prowess in Statistic, has given shape to the statistical analysis in this research.
My special thanks are due to the Directors, Deputy Directors, Assistant Directors, Presidents, Secretaries and the staff of Khadi and Village Industries Board, The Regional office of the Department of Sericulture, The office of the Assistant Director Handlooms & Textiles, The District Statistics office, The District Industries centre and the Tamil Nadu Handicrafts show room, Poompuhar at Tiruchirappalli, The Directorate of Sericulture at Salem, The Regional Coir Board at Thanjavur, The Directorate of Census, The Directorate of Industries and Commerce, The Directorate of Economics and Statistics and The Khadi and Village Industries Commission at Chennai for providing the required data and information for this study. Some of the officials names I could not mention since it could run to more pages, have provided unstinted support clearing my queries and repeated follow-ups and helped me collect the right information from the right sources.

I would like to mention my gratitude to Dr.N.Padinabhan, Director of Documentation, Tamil University, Thanjavur for his guidance and inspiration shown.

I am very much indebted to Dr.Anil Jaganatha Raj, retired HOD of Economics, St. Joseph's College, Tiruchirappalli who had shown this seed of ambition in me to pursue this research and nurtured it with the required guidance, inspiration and support with much generosity.

With tears of joy and heart heavy with indebtedness, I thank my mother Mrs.Hari Priya, my father Mr.P.T.Panchanathan and my husband Mr.N.Kumar who sustained me with their affectionate encouragement, inspiration and understanding support throughout the study. The enormous sacrifices they have endured for my sake has in truth propelled me to accomplish this venture.
My husband has been truly understanding exhibiting his confidence in my capabilities now and then, but for which I would not have endured till this completion. I am truly grateful to this friend and philosopher of mine.

With tears of indebtedness, I thank my sweet kids, my daughter Ms.K.Vijaya sadhana and my son K.Murali dharan who had been profusely understanding, supportive and inspiring throughout these years, sacrificing a lot of their share of love and care from their mother.

I would like to place my affectionate words of gratitude for my grandmother Shrimathi.K.Parvathi ammal who by her unstinted follow-ups of my progress and constant prayers for my success provided me courage to complete this study. I also thank my brothers and sister and Mrs.Sridevl Ayyappa, my sister-in-law specially who had endured along with me and helped me complete this research.

I thank all my loving colleagues, my friends and my family members who had encouraged me by their inspirations.

I extend my heartfelt thanks to Mrs. P. Gomathi, M.A., of APS Typesetters, LIC Colony, Trichy-21, for the excellent computer typesetting and Laser printing of this report.

I thank the Almighty, the power behind all this, for sharing with me all that was endured for good.
