DEDICATED TO

MY DEAR FATHER

Lt. Shri Suraj Prasad Chourasia
The main sources of mathematical invention seem to be within man rather than outside of him, his own invetrate and insatiable curiosity, his constant itching for intellecual adventure and likewise the main obstacles to mathematical progress also seem to be within himself, his scandalous laziness and inertia, his fear of adventure, his need of conformity to old standards and his obsession by mathematical ghosts.

- SARTON