ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

First and foremost, I would like to thank my supervisor Dr. Barkatullah Khan, for his expert guidance, continuous encouragement and lending me through this extremely interesting work. His continuous support, guidance motivation, enthusiasm, patience and immense knowledge of Middle East region has helped me a lot in all the time of research and writing of this thesis. Words cannot express my gratitude for him as he was not only my mentor but also gave unparalleled advices.

Words fail to express my appreciation to Neera Goyal Mam from Department of Economics for her continuous support, generous care, guidance and motivation during my research period.

I must thank a number of persons without whose help this study would not have been possible. These people have not only encouraged me but have helped me at various stages of the study. Isha is one such friend who has helped me a lot during my entire research. I am also indebted for providing me her unlimited help all the time during my research. I could not have succeeded without the invaluable support from Isha, Karuna and Seema.

I would like to thank all of my friends who regularly provided me with their motivational lecture and help, Imdad, Shibul, Deepak, Ravi, Mohnish, Rohit, Sanoj, Shaily, Sahid, Waqar, Adeeb, P. K. Singh, Arshad, Fazal and my younger brother Tajuddin Khan without their regular support and help this research would not have take this shape. I am sincerely thankful and lucky to have them in my life.

I am grateful to the officials and library staffs of the Ratan Tata Library, Delhi School of Economics, Library staff of JNU, Library staff of Central University, Delhi University, IDSA library staff and UN library Delhi staff for their assistance in the collection of data and information for my thesis.

I also thank my advisory committee for their valuable suggestions.

Last but not the least, I express my deepest gratitude to my family members especially my parents, my brother Tajuddin Khan and sister Noorsaba, and Nasreen, whose constant support and encouragement boosted my moral and gave me confidence in every stage of this research work.
