I acknowledge my gratitude to my supervisor, Professor Pravin Visaria, who initiated and sustained my interest in this area of enquiry. With my constant intrusion into his busy schedule and numerous commitments, I was able to gain insights into the dynamics of the labour force on which he has pondered deeply over the last twenty five years. I thank him for the patience with which he listened and responded to my numerous queries and for making my long and dreary drudge through this work challenging and interesting.

I am also grateful to Professor G.V.S.R. Murty who helped me in tackling the econometric issues involved in the analysis. I acknowledge also the help extended by Professor V.P. Shah in my computer work.

I am thankful to the authorities of the National Sample Survey Organisation for permitting me to use the regional level data of the Thirty Second Round Employment - Unemployment Survey (1977-78). I gratefully acknowledge the help extended by Mr. Paul Jacob and the staff of the NSSO, Calcutta, to make my work and stay in that city in January 1984 comfortable.

The doctoral fellowship awarded to me during the period July 1982 to June 1986, by the Indian Council of Social Science Research enabled me to take up this research work on a full time basis. I am thankful to the authorities of the ICSSR.
My thanks are due also to the administrative and library staff of the Sardar Patel Institute of Economic and Social Research for providing the facilities for my research. The staff and members of the Gujarat Institute of Area Planning have also provided support. I am thankful to them. My special thanks are due to Kalpana Mehta, Librarian of the GIAP, who has provided excellent and prompt library service to me through these years.

I am extremely grateful to Shri K.R. Satheesan and Ms Dalia who typed various drafts of the thesis. They provided competent, consistent and most importantly, cheerful typing assistance.

I fondly remember the help received from many of my friends, like Hanumantha Acharya, Mahendra Dev, Koval Ram, Anil, Dinesh, Amita, Jayshree and Dr. Devendra Kothari during these years.

The help and constant encouragement given by my husband and family do not require acknowledgement in the truly Indian spirit. However, one little member of my family deserves special mention. My warmest gratitude is towards my little daughter Angika, who arrived just in time to supervise the final draft of the thesis and turn my most anxious moments into moments of joy.
