ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Sometimes, I wonder, how much is this page of acknowledgements important, as mounting the cosmic and arduous cliff of research in itself is quite insistent, one may feel like getting away without this... But, despite of all this, at this important point of my life and career, I am finding myself even more humbled and a sense of gratefulness is encapturing me... I realize that this Thesis would be incomplete without a complete appreciation of some people in my life who have contributed directly or indirectly...

how do I thank A Imighty for choosing for me that He has chosen... Thankyou for choosing this set of parents for me...when You did this... You did everything for me... My parents instilled in me the courage and character and a deep love for knowledge at a tender age... it was this that has brought me here today... Thankyou God for embellishing my life with Amit, my husband...my best friend... who sketched a progressive life for me and stood like a rock for me whenever I needed him and research time was no exception...rather it proved to be the litmus test... My two stalwarts... my younger siblings... Sunil and Neetu have an unsaid commitment that I can never be down and out...the support of both of you in my research is just unexplainable... This recto is just too small to thank both of you...

I extend a deep sense of gratitude for my guide Dr. N alini Malhotra for imparting the knowledge and the intricacies of research and to be there whenever needed... specially at some crucial times when it felt that things are not in control but you took all the pains to control the things in the best of the manners. Mam, I thank you for that till the...Eternity...
I am indebted to Dr. Vandana Sharma, Professor, Dept. of Psychology, Punjabi University, Patiala for her unconditional motherly love. Mam, your appreciating eyes are a part of my life now and are a source of inspiration and set standards to live up to. Your impeccable research aptitude helped me being an aspiring critical researcher. Your inputs were more than important…rather…they were precious.

I am thankful to Dr. B.S. Sandhu, Professor & Head, Dept. of Psychology, Punjabi University, Patiala for all the support and a genuine concern. Sir, your presence has always been supportive. Thanking you will always remain an understatement.

I thank Dr. J.M. Jerath, Professor, Panjab University, Chandigarh from the bottom of my heart to lend his expertise and golden words during the research. I thank Dr. Radhey Shyam, Professor, Dept. of Psychology, M.D. University, Rohtak, for ungreying an important area of my research as I felt stuck and thought of giving up on that particular league, but your miraculous solution served many things.

I thank Dr. Parwinder Singh, my former colleague and a friend forever now, for giving meaning to my data.

I thank Dr. Vidhu Mohan, Assistant Professor, Dept. of Psychology, Punjabi University, Patiala for being a constant & a genuine support. You helped and advised like a true friend.

I thank Dr. Mamtashaarma, Assistant Professor, Dept. of Psychology, Punjabi University, Patiala for her genuine concern. Mam, I appreciate that as that made a difference.
I thank Jaspal, my colleague and a younger brother, for his consistent co-operation. I thank Rupinder, Manjeet, P arjesh, S ir, V arinder, K rishan and V ineeet for their support.

I thank my college teacher M ahindroo for making Psychology my life. I thank my school teacher G urjeet for enlightening me that knowledge is power and I too can be powerful...

I thank all the participants of the study as well as the principals of the schools that I visited.

Finally, I dedicate this Dissertation to my 6 years old son, Abhay Laksh, who has been a part of it every minute. Abhay, tomorrow, when you grow up and read this fondly, then I will tell you how we both grew together with this. But for now I bless you for all the strength that your presence instils in me. I bless you to turn out into a thorough gentleman... Someone who respects women... And loves life... Just like your father... I am a proud mother... And I wish to continue to be the one for the rest of my life..
