A time-consuming solitary journey packed with the quest and excitement for learning, understanding and contributing while being sprinkled with frustration is about to finish, which would not have been possible without the help and support of various people along the way.

As Sri Aurobindo mentioned “The first principle of teaching is that nothing can be taught”. This propels one on to the path of self-learning and I have been fortunate to have my supervisor Prof. O. P. Wali as a true facilitator and guide providing me the light to remain steadfast in my multi-disciplinary study work and providing extremely useful, timely and constructive critiques and recommendations.

Sri Ramakrishna Paramhansa said “The world is indeed a mixture of truth and make-believe. Discard the make-believe and take the truth”. I have indeed been blessed to have parents and grandparents who inculcated the right values and taught me how to distinguish between the make-believe and truth. Pursuing the truth is a fundamental requirement while undertaking this long private journey just as in the course of life.

This journey would not have been possible without the endless encouragement and support of my wife and two adorable understanding children. They kept reminding me what Rabindranath Tagore had said “I slept and dreamt that life was joy. I awoke and saw that life was service. I acted and behold, service was joy”. Thus contributing back to the body of knowledge in the field of service industry and service quality has indeed been fulfilling with them being by my side.

One of the messages of the Bhagavad Gita is “Action should culminate in wisdom”. I would like to thank the editors of the three journals, Springer, Emerald and IEEE Xplore, as well as the various anonymous reviewers and academicians who provided their invaluable comments and suggestions to help me in my actions alongwith enriching the content to publish / accept for publishing three academic papers which would help towards increasing the body of knowledge.

There have been various professors from the Indian Institute of Foreign Trade and other colleges in Delhi such as Indian Institute of Technology, Indraprastha Institute of Information Technology, etc; various colleagues from my previous and current organizations Tata Consultancy Services, Microsoft India, Indian Computer Emergency Response Team; all the field survey respondents and various friends (professional and personal) and family members who kept supporting me on this journey constantly. As Rabindranath Tagore said “I have become my own version of an optimist. If I can’t make it through one door, I’ll go through another door - or I’ll make a door. Something terrific will come no matter how dark the present”. They all kept showing me the doors or helped me make the doors so that I remain optimist.

I am also thankful to Indian Institute of Foreign Trade for providing me the opportunity to undertake this multi-disciplinary study in an extremely conducive environment and support me in all possible manners in this journey.

Hopefully the contribution and blessings of so many people has culminated in something terrific and somewhat beautiful. Thank you to all once again!
