“In all human affairs…. There is a single dominant factor- time. To make sense of the present state of science, we need to know how it got like that : we cannot avoid a historical account…. To extrapolate into the future we must look backwards a little into the past”

===== J.M. Ziman

Ali, M. (2000). Dynamics of vegetable production, distribution and consumption in Asia. AVRDC Publication No. 00-498

Department of Agriculture Co-operation, Ministry of Agriculture, Govt. of India. http://agricoop.nic.in/Agristatistics.htm

Directorate of Economics & Statistics, Department of Agriculture Co-operation, Govt. of India. http://dacnet.nic.in/eands/latest_2006.htm

xiv

Sait E. (2007). Economic analysis of agrochemical use for weed control in field-grown celery: A case study for Turkey Department of Agricultural Economics, Faculty of Agriculture, Ege University, 35100 Bornova, Izmir, Turkey Science Direction.

