INTRODUCTION 1-3

MATERIALS AND METHODS 4-7

CHAPTER I

The hypothalamo-hypophysial neurosecretory system in Indian fresh-water catfish, Mystus vittatus (Bloch) 8-41

Introduction 8-12
Observations 12-27

A. Hypothalamus 12-14
B. Nucleus preopticus 15-19
C. Tractus preoptico-hypophyseus 19-23
D. Nucleus lateralis tuberis 23-24
E. Neurohypophysis 24-27

Discussion 27-41

CHAPTER II

The structure of the pituitary gland of Mystus vittatus (Bloch) and Channa punctatus (Bloch) 42-78

(C) Quantitative study of the reproductive cycle

i. The gonad volume and gonosomatic index 163-171

ii. Quantitative study of the relative number of the oocytes of different diameter 171-178

iii. Quantitative study in respect of the corpora atretica and post-ovulatory follicles during the reproductive cycle 178-181

iv. Quantitative study of different spermatogenetic stages in testes 181-189

Discussion 189-210

CHAPTER V

The seasonal changes in the hypothalamo-neurohypophysial system in correlation with the reproductive cycle of Indian fresh-water catfish Mystus vittatus (Bloch) 211-231

Introduction 211-212

Observations 212-226

(a) Cytological variations in the nucleus preopticus, on the basis of the intensity of neurosecretory material during the reproductive cycle 213-216

(b) Karyometric study of the nucleus preopticus during the reproductive cycle 216-225

(c) Cyclical variations in the tractus preoptico-hypophyseus and the neurohypophysis during the reproductive cycle 225-226

Discussion 226-231
CHAPTER VI

The seasonal changes in the pars-distalis and their correlation with the reproductive cycle of Mystus vittatus (Bloch) and Channa punctatus (Bloch) 232-268

Introduction 232-234

Observations 234

A. Cytological variations in the basophils and the acidophils of proximal pars-distalis 235-244

B. Seasonal changes in the maximum length of the basophils and acidophils of proximal pars-distalis 244-259
