ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

First of all, I express my hearty gratitude to Dr. Ch. Budhi, Professor, Department of Anthropology, Manipur University for the great pain he took in supervising and guiding me at every stage of my research work that has resulted in the thesis, submitted in its form.

I am in debt to Dr. W. Nabakumar, Associate Professor, Department of Anthropology, Dr. R.K. Ranjan, Deputy Registrar-I, and Dr. N. Joykumar, Associate Professor, Department of History, all of Manipur University who gave every possible academic inspiration while undertaking the course of research on the theme of my present work.

I owe my sense of gratitude also to all my informants for the irreplaceable co-operations and initiatives they extended to me in the course of my investigation among them, without which the present work would not have been brought to light. My thanks goes also to CJMs and JMIs of Thoubal and Senapati Districts considering their kind acts of permitting me to go through the official records on the case histories of the various female criminals, which I used as secondary data of my expositions in the study.
Last but not least, I thank the Manipur University, Department of Anthropology thereof in particular, for allowing me to work as research scholar therein, providing me all the necessary facilities.
