ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

It is a great pleasure to take this opportunity of expressing my gratitude to a number of persons who helped me in various ways in producing this thesis. I shall remain indebted to Dr. T. Shyamacharan Singh, Associate Professor, Department of Anthropology, Manipur University, for accepting me to get registered for Ph. D. under his guidance, as well as for his parental care and guidance in every step of research work, right from the initial stage till the final shape of the thesis.

It was a tough challenge for me to carry out a field work in Poumai inhabited areas of Senapati District, Manipur which lack basic infrastructure like well constructed black topped roads and transportation facility, etc. Walking up and down along the muddy, narrow and steep hill roads during those cold, windy and rainy days was really a painful and, of course, an unforgettable experience. Over and above, those areas were fully under the control of an underground outfit, NSCN (IM) roaming here and there with sophisticated weapons. My plan to conduct a household survey was failed as the village youths taken away all the schedule forms from me, only to return them after filling in by themselves with full of fabricated information. That's why I decided to drop this topic from my thesis. But the Poumai people are simple, very calm and hospitable.
It was only because of their simplicity and co-operation that I could successfully collect my require data despite all odds. So, I am grateful to all the Poumai people. I cannot, but mention the names of a few selected persons, like Mrs. Veisherou (Johney) who first introduced me to her brother-in-law Mr. Alexander Pao, Principal of the Mt. Everest College, Senapati. He arranged almost everything for me such as, lodging, introduction to the subjects and further contact to other villages, so on. Mr. Hliikhanai Shekho and Baosii Rosiimai, the kings of Purul Akutpa Village, Mr. Thaole Nghole, Puniilow, Yaoru Yumai, Ng. Ngaile imparted their knowledge on the Poumai culture and history, and also provided me all printed literatures available to them. I owe special thanks to these persons. Mr. D. Row of Lakhamai Village, Mr. Stephen of Purul Village and Mr. Ahrii Kanii of Saranamai Village who provided me shelter during my field work in their villages. Their kindness and invaluable co-operation will be evergreen in my mind. My heartful gratitude goes to them.

I am grateful to my teacher Dr. M.C. Arun, Associate Professor, Deptt. of Anthropology, M.U for extending helping hands whenever I ask for. Thanks are also owe to my brothers and sisters for their financial and moral supports, particularly Miss. K. Bhavamni, my younger sister who assisted me in data analysis and took the pains taking task of printing the thesis. I acknowledge the helps of my nephew Mr. Bobby, Danny and his friend Suraj for accompanying me in my field work and Mr. Abung and his brother Bobby of “Digital Printer ” Keisampat, Imphal for lending me a Computer at the initial stage of my analysis.
Finally, I express my everlasting gratitude to my husband and in-laws for their moral support and co-operation in bringing out the thesis.
