ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I am immensely grateful to Prof. R.S. Pathak for his advise and encouragement all along the way.

My guide, Dr. U. Varma, has helped shape this with outstanding critical insights, valuable suggestions, and unending encouragement and support. I am grateful to her for her untiring enthusiasm and unwavering support, and for having sustained me so richly throughout the work of writing this thesis. I would also like to thank her for all her understanding and patient help, which enabled me to bring this project to fruition.

I am indebted to the ASRC, Hyderabad for giving me the fellowship which facilitated my research work and at the same time thank its staff for being so cordial, helpful and for rendering such a supporting and congenial environment. I am also thankful to the American Library at Bombay and Delhi, for utilization of their resources.

My mother, Smt. Geeta Jha nurtured in me the love of literature, language and life that sparked my initial interest in this project and sustained it to its end, and also to my father for his encouragement. My gratitude is lovingly acknowledged in this dedication.

My brothers and my wife have given me unceasing love and support throughout the writing of this thesis and to them I am deeply grateful.

I am also thankful to my colleagues, to Anand Kumar, for help, cooperation, and kindness. Dr. V. D. Jha needs special mention for his timely help.

I wish that I could acknowledge all the debts of gratitude that I incurred while writing this thesis.
