ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Writing this thesis did not start with the day I attended the Ph.D. programme. The process started long before that. My parents often told, and re-told, anecdotes of my childhood. In these anecdotes, I portrayed as a curious and headstrong child who emphatically repeated ‘I must!’ before running away from investigate and surfed into the world around me. Such stubbornness characteristics could have been neglected or rejected by my parents, but I was lucky to grow up in an atmosphere of allowing and supportive family saying ‘if he says that he must be, he must!’ Therefore, with all my love and gratitude, I wished to dedicate this thesis to Shri R.K. Gouro Singh and Smt. Ngangom Shanti Devi, my parents. Thank you all for all your support and trust in me through the years.

Acknowledgements in doctoral dissertations often portray the research process as a journey. Such journeys are described to contain unexpected twists and turns. I can easily sing along in this chorus line. If I ever believed that I bought a ticket to a safe journey to a specific destination, I have been proved wrong. My journey has been rocky and challenging. It has offered many changes in means of transports and often I had to find my way through the wilderness, not knowing which way to go. If it had not been for the guidance and support from others, I would have lost my way completely. Therefore, I owe many thanks to a lot of people:
First, to Dr Soibam Birahari Singh, my research supervisor: thank him for asking challenging questions that made me to think in new directions and dig deeper and for never persisting your own answers to these questions. Thank for his close reading of my texts. This has helped me in improving my writing. Thank you for never giving me up, leaving me in the scary jungle forever.

In the final part of the writing process, Dr Sarungbam Gunadhor Singh has, as a ‘second reader’, read and given insightful comments on my work, which had made it possible to come to the final destination of this journey. Thank him for bringing me home.

Without financial support, the work would never reach the goal of the journey at all. I owe a sheath deal to the University Grants Commission (UGC), New Delhi, for allowing me to work as the Junior Research Fellowship (JRF) for the initial first two years and Senior Research Fellowship (SRF) for the next few years (till the submission of the thesis).

Thanks to Dr Nilima Bhagabati, Professor and Head, Department of Education, Guwahati University, Assam; Dr Basaparajappa, Professor and Head, Department of Psychology, Mysore University, Karnataka; Dr Irom Gambhir Singh, Associate Professor, Department of English, Manipur University; Dr Premlata Maisnam, Assistant Professor, Department of Education, Manipur University; Dr Laimayum Bishwanath Sharma and Dr Potshangbam Milan Khangamcha, Assistant Professors, Department of Philosophy, Manipur University; Dr Dilan Salam, Regional Director, IGNOU-Imphal Centre; Dr Nongthombam Jiten @ Bobby Singh, Research Associate, Centre for Myanmar Studies, Manipur University; Dr Maibam Chourjit Singh, Assistant Professor, Department of Physical Education & Sports Science, Manipur University; Dr Maibam Romeo Singh, Assistant Professor, Centre for Biodiversity Studies, Department of Botany, Nagaland University; and Dr Ngangom Jasantakumar Singh, Post-doctoral Fellow, Department of Political Science, Manipur University; who have listened, commiserated, provided advice to all my various roadblocks, and celebrated successes, thank you!

Even though the process of writing a thesis is mostly a lonesome journey, I have had fellow travellers along the way. Many thanks to Dr Longjam Jaideva Singh (Chemistry); Dr Indira Huidrom (Education); Orjubala Haorongbam (Political Science); Chingakham Birana Devi (Library and Information Science); Dr Kshetrimayum Narayan Singh (Commerce); Laishram Ibomcha Singh (Manipuri); Dr Nongmaithem Sanjoy Singh, Naorem Norjit Singh and Chakpram Hemanta Singh (Education); Pangambam Romajit Singh (Adult Continuing Education & Extension) and Khumukcham Joychand Singh (Mass Communication). Our long thesis-discussion meetings at the Manipur University Canteen started a very stimulating and valuable exchange of thoughts and ideas which has continued ever since. Thanks to Shri Tokpam Jinesh Singh, Canteen Manager, Manipur University Canteen, for providing the space.
Special thanks to Shri R. K. Mohen Singh and Shri Wairokpam Kesho Singh, staffs of University Employment Information and Guidance Bureau, Manipur University, Canchipur, for their amazing story that was an inspiration for my own work.

What would a journey without lunch and coffee be like? Not only would I be hungry for food, but also for company and easy chats. Thanks to Dr Lamalu Thaimei, Assistant Professor and Head; Dr Soubam Kiran Singh, Guest Faculty; Mr Heitham Biren Singh; and all the staffs and students of the Department of Adult Continuing Education and Extension at Manipur University I am both ‘round and sound’.

I also thank Professor John R. Kirby, Faculty of Education; Christopher Knapper, Emeritus Professor of Psychology; Patrick Lemon, Ph.D. Candidate, Faculty of Education; and William J. Egnatoff, Associate Professor, Faculty of Education; Queen's University, Kingston, Canada; and the International Journal of Lifelong Education for the ‘Lifelong Learning Questionnaire’ adopted for the present study.

I also thank the American Psychological Association (APA) for providing the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association or APA Manual (2010, 6th edition) and the weekly ‘PsycCRITIQUES’.

I also extend my thanks to the Manipur University Library and its staffs, and the UGC-INFLIBNET for providing access to the wide pool of knowledge through Thesis, Books and Journals (both print and electronic).
To be able to get through this kind of journey it is important to remember to have a life outside the academy. Thanks to all my friends [1997 Batch of Ramakrishna Mission Vidyapith, Deoghar, Bihar (now in Jharkhand)]. Thanks for being there.

Last, but not the least, to all the postgraduate students of Manipur University for their active participation in the present study. Without their support and participation, the present study would not have been accomplished.
