ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

It is quite impossible to adequately express my gratitude to all who contributed to the success of this thesis.

I am specially grateful to Dr. S. Sivaraman, my guide and mentor, for suggesting the problems pursued in this thesis, for providing invaluable and inspiring guidance throughout the course of these investigations, and for lending me moral and intellectual encouragement in abundant measure.

I am indebted to Dr. Y. V. G. S. Murti, Professor of Physics, Indian Institute of Technology, Madras for kindly extending the facilities of his laboratory, for providing collaborative inspiring guidance and many useful discussions. I have greatly benefitted by his vast knowledge of the subject.

I wish to acknowledge my grateful appreciation to the University Grants Commission, India and Education Department of Government of Madhya Pradesh for sponsoring me as a Teacher Research Fellow under the Faculty Improvement Programme and for financial support.

I also wish to extend my sincere thanks to the authorities of I.I.T., Madras for allowing me to use their facilities available and to stay in their hostels. I am extremely grateful to Prof. C. Ramasastry and Prof. R. Srinivasan, the then Head of the Physics Department, I.I.T. Madras, in their respective terms, for permitting me to use the departmental facilities freely.
I wish to put on record the interest shown by Dr. R.K. Shrivastava, Professor and Head of Physics Department, University of Saugar, in the present research work.

There have been a number of useful comments, discussions and suggestions from my colleagues and friends at I.I.T., Madras and University of Saugar. Though I am unable to recount all of these contributions in specific terms, but I am grateful for them all. None the less, especially to Mr. K.L.N. Prasad, Mr. U. Benjamin, Dr. (Mrs.) Usha, Dr. T.V. Selvarajan, Dr. Y. Raman, Dr. R.K. Pande, Mr. G. Balkrishna, Rakesh Bhargava, B.S.N. Murthy, S. Sapru, Dr. K. Hariharan, Mr. Ravisheshkhar and Mr. Pinjare, S.L.

I feel it my duty to put on record my sincere indebtedness to my brother Shri C.N. Dalal who supported me during my early education and helped me to come up to the present stage.

Finally, the job would not be have been carried out through to completion without the patience, understanding and encouragement of my wife Smt. Shakuntala Dalal.