Chapter 4

Research Methodology -------------------------------95 - 130

4.1 Introduction------------------------------------------95
4.2 Research Process---------------------------------------95
4.3 Research Design-----------------------------------------97
4.4 Scale Development---------------------------------------99
  4.4.1 Construct for Switching Trigger--------------------100
  4.4.2 Construct for Perceived Service Quality------------101
4.5 Data Collection Method---------------------------------102
  4.5.1 Qualitative Work-----------------------------------103
    4.5.1.1 Interviews with Bank Managers------------------
    4.5.1.2 Interviews with Customers-----------------------
    4.5.1.3 Scale items for Switching Trigger and Perceived Service Quality
4.6 Questionnaire Development-----------------------------106
  4.6.1 Questionnaire Format-------------------------------106
    4.6.1.1 Identification of Switchers/Non switchers (Section 1)
    4.6.1.2 Switching Triggers (Section 2)------------------
    4.6.1.3 Perceived Service Quality (Section 3)----------
    4.6.1.4 Consumer Commitment (Section 4)---------------
    4.6.1.5 Intention to Switch (Section 5)---------------
    4.6.1.6 Personal Information (Section 6)--------------
    4.6.2 Pre-Testing--------------------------------------114
4.7 Sampling Design----------------------------------------114
4.8 Data Collection----------------------------------------117
4.9 Data Analysis Strategy---------------------------------117
  4.9.1 Data Cleaning--------------------------------------117
4.9.2 Measurement of Constructs
4.9.3 Exploratory Factor Analysis
4.9.4 Validity and Reliability of Measures
4.9.4.1 Validation of Scales
4.9.5 Structural Equation Modeling
4.9.5.1 Partial Least Squares Approach
4.9.6 Independent Sample t Test and ANOVA
4.10 Conclusion

Chapter 5
Data Analysis

5.1 Introduction
5.2 Data Cleaning
5.2.1 Screening of Data for Missing Values
5.2.2 Identification of Outliers
5.2.3 Standardization of Data
5.3 Perceived Service Quality Scale
5.3.1 Exploratory Factor Analysis
5.3.2 Validation of the Perceived Service Quality Scale
5.3.2.1 Convergent Validity
5.3.2.2 Discriminant Validity
5.3.2.3 Reliability
5.3.3 Validation of Perceived Service Quality Construct
5.4 Validation of Switching Trigger Scale
5.4.1 Convergent Validity
5.4.2 Discriminant Validity
5.4.3 Reliability
5.5 Analysis of Relationship between Switching Triggers and Perceived Service Quality Dimensions
5.6 Research Model Analysis
5.6.1 Model Validation - Model Fit Indices and P values
5.6.2 Latent Variable Coefficients of Measures
5.6.3 Path Coefficients and P values
5.6.3.1 Linkage between Triggers and Perceived Service Quality
5.6.3.2 Linkage between Perceived Service Quality and Switching Intention under the moderating influence of Commitment
5.6.3.3 Moderating Influence of Consumer Commitment
5.7 Research Model Analysis without moderating influence of Consumer Commitment
Chapter 6

Discussions, Findings and Conclusions ------191 - 232

6.1 Introduction 191
6.2 Framing of Objectives of the Study 192
6.3 Objective 1: Development of Scale to Measure Perceived Service Quality 195
6.4 Objective 2: Development of Scale to Measure Switching Triggers and the Influence of Triggers on Service Quality Dimensions 201
6.5 Objective 3: Linkage among Variables – Research Model 209
6.6 Influence of Demographic Variables on Switching Triggers, Perceived Service Quality and Switching Intention 219
6.7 Conclusions and Managerial Implications 225
6.8 Academic Contribution 229
6.9 Limitations of the Research Work 230
6.10 Scope for Further Research 231
