Acknowledgements

It is a matter of great pleasure to express my deep sense of gratitude and indebtedness to Prof. S.S. Ali, M.Sc., Ph.D., F.B.S., Professor and Head, School of Life Sciences, Ravishankar University, Raipur for his valuable guidance, keen interest, encouragement and suggestions throughout this study. His able supervision and affectionate touch, inspite of so many difficulties has enabled me to bring this dissertation to a meaningful conclusion.

I express my sincere thanks to Dr. A.K. Pati, M.Sc., Ph.D., Reader, School of Life Sciences, Ravishankar University, Raipur for his willing help and co-operation in statistical analysis of data.

My heartful thanks are due to Shri B. Barik, Forest Ranger, Shri P.L. Kashyap, Forester, Shri C.M. Pandey, A.C.F. and all other staff of North Raipur Forest Division who helped me during my field work.

Thanks are also extended to Shri S.Habib, A.C.F. (Retd.), Shri M.K.Bist, Divisional Manager, M.P.S.F.D.C., Bilaspur and his staff for their help in various ways.

I am thankful to Shri R.N.Deshmukh, I.F.S., D.F.O. who inspired me to gear up the study of agro-forestry and if conclusive positively help encouraging people in saving the greenery of Chhattisgarh region.

I am extremely thankful to all the farmers of Raipur and Bilaspur district on whose fields this study was conducted.

I would also like to thank all the Faculty members, especially Ku. Nibha Gupta, of School of Life Sciences, Ravishankar University, Raipur for their encouragement, co-operation and moral support throughout this endeavour.

I am also grateful to the Govt. of Madhya Pradesh, Forest Department, Bhopal for having permitted me to undertake higher studies, and also for sanctioning study leave for completing this work.

No words can adequately express my gratitude for encouragement, moral and all other necessary support of my wife Mrs. Dolly Jena throughout this study, even during her sorrowful days.
