ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Gujarat University and its administrators put faith in me and allowed me to carry out this research under the auspices of the University and I am grateful to them all for the same.

Dr. Sarla Achuthan is the guiding spirit behind this research. Her patience, encouragement, active involvement, ideas and advice contributed greatly to successfully complete this research. I owe my sincere thanks to her.

Several of my colleagues helped me in forming the ideas and contributed to my knowledge of the field. I have greatly benefitted from discussions with them. I may mention, particularly, Prof. Kshamanidhi Adabar of the Institute of Management, Nirma University, Mr. Aneesh Chinubhai, Gujarat State Petroleum Corporation, Gandhinagar and Prof. Tripurasundari Joshi, Institute of Management, Nirma University. They always found time to listen to me, helped improve my thesis and made valuable suggestions.

I am grateful to the Director of the Institute of Management, Prof. Dr. C. Gopalkrishan, for his constant encouragement and advice.

Mr. Seshadri of the Institute of Management, Nirma University edited some of the chapters and I am grateful to him for the same.

Lastly I owe immense debt to my father late Mr. M.G.Doshit and my mother late Mrs. Sharda Doshit, my sister Rekha Doshit and my wife Malti Doshit for encouragement at various stages, and for patience.

I owe special thanks to Amisha Doshit and Mrudul Doshit who read several parts of the draft and gave administrative support.
