REFERENCES

8. Erbentraut.

15. Ibid., p. 107.

16. Ibid., Jan. 6, 1900.

17. Ibid., p. 4.

19. Ibid., p. 50.

21. Pattee, Fred Lewis. 'Sidelights on American Literature, New York, 1922.

24. Geismar, Maxwell. 'Rebels and Ancestors'.

27. Letters from Jack London to C. Johns, Nov. 21, 1899.

30. Ibid., to Johns, Dec. 1900.

36. Ibid., p. 137.

*****
BIBLIOGRAPHY

Criticism and Commentary on Jack London:

Colbron, Grace Isabel. 'Jack London what he was and what he accomplished? ' Bookman, 44 : pp.41-51, Jan. 1915.

Flink, Andrew. 'Call of the Wild':Parental metaphor. JLN 7 : pp.53-61, 1974.

Jack London's resignation from the Socialist party.' Overland Monthly, n.s. 69, 446, May, 1917.

Labor, Earle. 'Portrait of the Artist as a professional'. JLN 6 : (1973) pp. 93-98.

Noel, Joseph. 'Footloose in Arcadia'. N.Y. Carrick, 1940.

Woodbridge, Hensley C. 'Into What languages has London been translated?' JLN 84, 1974.

Essays and Articles by Jack London

"Are there any thrills left in life?" Overland Monthly LXIX (May, 1917) p.32.

Books by Jack London:

Adventure. (New York: Macmillan, 1911).

The Mutiny of the Elsinore. (New York: Grosset and Dunlop. 1914).

The Valley of the Moon. (New York: Grosset and Dunlop, 1913).

