ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Any undertaking for its success needs the cooperation of a team of workers and so is the thesis for a degree that is no doubt attained by any one student who toils, moils and burns midnight oil while using her own hands, heart and head. It is truly the resultant of a number of persons viz. the guiding major teacher under whom he or she registers, who plans and offers official guidance at each step, supported by the associate teachers who provides specialized statistical guidance in analysis and interpretation of the data if and whenever in need, the support of colleges and schools as well as the family members who co-operate with her and bears all types of burden while collecting data of subjects. The present investigator, being a married working woman with multifarious duties, has undertaken a specifically selected problem for her Ph.D degree thesis much related to her own interest and area of work and has been highly motivated to work successfully and experiences a great pleasure to express her deep gratitude to such distinguished experts and sources of motivation as well as inspiration for success in her work herewith in the lines that follow.
First, let me sincerely thank my major guide Dr. Bipinbhai Contractor, the Head of Department of Psychology at Smt. L. & C. Mehta Arts College, Ahmedabad, whom I used to approach and disturb any time for my work at the cost of his own work schedule, and who ungrudgingly considered it his duty to guide his students. It is my good luck to have found such a professor among today’s professors who nowadays rarely spares any time in midst of their varied works - academics, social and family as well as economic types faced in the present era. I also would like to acknowledge my feelings of thankfulness to his associates in the same college as well as elsewhere, the professors of B. Ed. college viz. Dr. Navin Patel, Dr. Dinesh Panchal, Dr. Ashwin Jansari, Dr. Kamayani Mathur, Dr. Suresh Majmudar, Dr. Indira Desai and a number of other experts in their areas, who never denied for help whenever I used to approach them for their guidance.

Most fortunately, I was highly motivated to come in contact with the most distinguished psychologist in India, Prof. A. S. Patel, a rare combination of experts in Psychology and Research Methodology as well as Statistical Advanced Techniques at home and abroad. You will be happy to know that I was fortunate to come in his contact through my professors who happened to be Dr. A. S. Patel’s students for guidance during their times. How lucky I am to get specialized statistical guidance from such a great grandfather - teacher, who, though I am not his direct student, spared most of his time at this old age (87 yrs old now) to teach research methodology and new advanced statistical techniques of ANOVA, ANCOVA and GAP tests, for which I had hardly to go to his place at Baroda, but for which he used to visit my place at Ahmedabad. He did this simply because he loves to teach and encourage his young students who can raise up Psychology and research in Gujarat. How can I ever forget my indebtedness to such a loving and understanding teacher who loves not only to spare maximum time to teach the young, but who rarely loses an opportunity to meet their family members at their homes. May God give him still long, healthy and happy life not only in his interest, but even in the interest of his loving students.

It is impossible to express my feelings of indebtedness and gratitude to my family members, especially my husband Dr. Dhiren Kubavat, specialized in Homeopathy who has provided me lot of motivation and inspiration to undertake such a heavy task. The word of 'THANKS' seems to be a very small one, as compared to the great support provided to me, without which this work could only be a dream for me.
It's very true to express, that he has been the 'heart' of my work without which it seems to have no 'life' in it. I extend a deep sense of gratitude to my mother-in-law for having shared much of my duties at home whenever I needed time outside home. I am highly obliged to all of my family members for extending support in all respects which helped me to flourish in my Ph.D. work. I can never forget the warm welcome given by them to my professor whenever he needed to stay back at our place to provide me guidance. I thank God to have placed me in such a wonderful family. I acknowledge my gratitude to my maternal uncle Dr. Krishnakant Kadakia, professor and guide in the field of Gujarati literature with whose support and assistance I got introduced to my guide Dr. Bipinbhai Contractor. He has always been kind and considerate in extending his scholarly guidance at every stage in my study. I also wish to extend sincere thankfulness and gratitude to Dr. Khusnuma Banaji, Prof. at St. Xavier's' College, who has been a devotedly born teacher and professor, interested in the growth and career of all students at her college, helped me a lot for my research work out of her way.

My heartfelt wishes and sincere gratitude to the Principal of Amrit-Jyoti School, Smt. Bhartiben Trivedi and late Smt. Chandraben for providing me the opportunity to work as a school counselor and also encouraging me to undergo the research work of Ph.D. The strength and concern provided by them in varied ways enabled me as a married working woman to successfully carry out the thesis work. I also acknowledge the Principals and teachers of various schools for their cooperation who permitted me to meet the students and their mothers for the purpose of data collection. Also my sincere thanks to the leading experts and psychologists of Ahmedabad, who willingly co-operated in the primary data collection needed for the pilot survey.

Last but not the least, I am highly indebted to my parents and especially my late mother who was and still is a guiding force in my life. This thesis is a blessing comes from her to have her dream come true for having a ‘doctor’ in her home. I respect and value the blessings left behind. My heartfelt feelings of deep gratitude shall ever remain for her. In all respects, I again thank God who has bestowed me with so many blessings which has helped me to grow so far.... May the shower of HIS blessings remain forever!!!
