ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

As I reached the shores-before another voyage begins-my mind flashes back to the day when I first set the sail. Ph.D. was my dream, but it is also true that I never wanted to do research with experimentation. When I was awarded University Research Scholarship, I sought the guidance of my esteemed teacher Professor Rajbir Hooda. He guided me through the uncharted seas and the outcome is in your hand.

A debt so precious as that of learning and knowledge cannot be repaid except through gratitude. I take this opportunity to record with a deep sense of humility, my spontaneous feelings of obligation and indebtedness to my reverend teacher and supervisor Dr. Rajbir Singh, Professor, Department of Psychology, M.D. University, Rohtak. His enlightening guidance, constructive ideas, and above all his mastery over the subject inspired me throughout my way to complete this formidable and challenging task.

I am also thankful to the respected teachers of this Department for their kindness and providing all necessary help whenever I needed it.

I am deeply obliged to all the students and friends who participated in the experiments.

I would also like to thank the laboratory and administrative staff of the Department for their co-operation. I wish to express my appreciation to M/s Gandhi Computer Centre for undertaking the processing of this manuscript with great efficiency and promptness.
My heart felt gratitude to my parents and relatives for their affection, encouragement and support, a fact that cannot be expressed adequately in words.

My special thanks are reserved for my sister, Mrs. Kavita Malik, whose endless help and affectionate encouragement always helped me sustain my effort and from the day first have largely contributed to the accomplishment of this work. I thank her for all what she has done for me.

Above all I thank the Lord for everything.
