REFERENCES

Åberg, B. (1951): The interaction of some auxin antagonists and 2, 4-D in root growth. Physiol. Plant. 4:627.

- 223 -

Chinoy, J.J. (1964b): Correlations in wheat as an aid to breeding for quantitative characters. Ibid. 345.

Crocker, W., and Barton, L.V. (1963): Physiology of seeds. Waltham, mass., Chronica bot.

James, G.M. and James, W.O. (1940): The formation of pyruvic acid in barley respiration. New Phytologist, 39: 266-270.

dovernalization bei einiger zweiährrigen Pflanze. Z.
Naturforsch. 2b: 444-449.

Locat, P. (1951): Repartition et variation du système ascorbique chez les végétaux. Biol. Abstr. 27,

Lee, A.E. (1955): The effects of ascorbic acid on seedling Club. 82:1-8.

von Ranunculus sceletus L. und einigen anderen

Lincoln, R.G. (1964): Flower inducing substances in plant

Preparation of a floral initiating extract from Xanthium, Science, 133:756.

Lincoln, R.G., Mayfield, D.L., Hutchins, R.Q., Cunningham, induction of Xanthium in response to application of an extract from a day neutral plant. Nature (Lond.) 195:918.

Stout, M. (1946): Relation of temperature to reproduction

Stowe, B. and Yamaki, T. (1957): The history and physio-Physiol. 8:181-216.

Stowe, B. and Yamaki, T. (1959): The gibberellins;

Sugawara, J. (1941b): Studies on the formation of ascorbic acid (Vitamin C) in plants. 4. Daily concentration of ascorbic acid content and the concentration of No.25487, 25, 2280, 1951.

Tan, K.-W. (1959): The effect of some organic acids on the duration of the vernalization stage in winter wheats.
(Russ. with Engl. summary), Bot. zh. 44, 1437-1444.

Tashima, Y. (1957): Physiologie der Blutenbildung von Raphanus sativus mit besondor Rucksicht auf die
3:25-58 (Lang, 1965).

